VMware Cloud Operations 8.x Professional V2 Sample Questions (Q46-Q51):

NEW QUESTION # 46

An administrator has been tasked to quickly recover unused allocated compute from existing development virtual machines (VMs) using vRealize Operations, as the vSphere cluster is now at capacity.

The current state of the environment:

The VMs either have dev or prod in their name.

Production VMs reside on cluster due to historical usage.

The administrator already has permission to modify any development VMs within the cluster.

Which approach below will quickly ensure cluster compute resources are recovered from the correct VMs?

- A. Generate an Oversized Virtual Machines Report to identify suitable virtual machines and liaise with the VM owners.
- B. Generate an Undersized Virtual Machines Report to identify suitable virtual machines and liaise with the VM owners.
- C. Exclude any Production virtual machines before running the Rightsize action.
- D. Use the Heavy Hitter VMs Dashboard to identify the VMs which are consistently consuming a large amount of resources and liaise with the VM owners.

Answer: C

Explanation:

To recover unused allocated compute resources quickly from development VMs in a cluster, the best approach is to use the Rightsize action while ensuring that Production virtual machines are excluded from the process. By excluding production VMs, the administrator can focus on development VMs (those with "dev" in their name) and adjust their resource allocations without affecting critical production systems.
