VMware Advanced VMware Cloud Foundation 9.0 Storage Sample Questions (Q54-Q59):

NEW QUESTION # 54

An Operations Engineer is managing a VCF Stretched Cluster configured with "Dual Site Mirroring" across Site A and Site B, plus a Witness.

A severe network failure causes "Total Site Isolation" at Site A. Site A completely loses network connectivity to BOTH Site B (the ISL drops) AND the remote Witness Appliance. Site A retains power and local networking.

...

vSAN Unicast Agent Status (Post-Failure Snapshot)

Site A Hosts -> Can only ping Site A Hosts.

Site B Hosts -> Can ping Site B Hosts AND Witness.

How do the Unicast Partition Groups and vSphere HA mechanics interact to resolve this specific Disaster Recovery scenario? (Select all that apply.)

- A. The vCenter Server automatically forces the Witness Appliance to migrate to Site A to re-establish quorum.
- B. vSphere HA detects that Site A's VMs have lost their datastore and network, triggering a cold restart of all Site A Virtual Machines onto the surviving compute hosts at Site B.
- C. Virtual machines on Site A will continue to run normally using their local SSD cache to absorb writes indefinitely until the network is restored.
- D. Site A forms its own local Partition Group, but because it holds less than 50% of the votes (no Site B, no Witness), DOM strips quorum, locking all storage access for the VMs on Site A.
- E. Site B and the Witness form the majority Partition Group (66% of votes). The DOM verifies quorum and makes the Site B data active.

Answer: B,D,E

NEW QUESTION # 55

What is the benefit of vSAN encryption?

- A. Better compression
- B. Reduced latency
- C. Faster reads
- D. Data security at rest

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 56

An L3 Support Engineer is configuring a VCF 9.0 vSAN Stretched Cluster. The cluster includes two sites (Preferred and Secondary).

The goal is to ensure Tier-1 database VMs strictly run on the Preferred Site during normal operations, but gracefully failover to the Secondary Site if the Preferred Site burns down.

The engineer uses Ruby vSphere Console (RVC) to check cluster state while configuring vSphere DRS.

[RVC Output: vsan.stretchedcluster_config]

Preferred Site: esx-01, esx-02, esx-03

Secondary Site: esx-04, esx-05, esx-06

...

Which TWO configurations MUST the engineer apply to the DRS Host/VM Groups to satisfy this DR requirement? (Choose 2.)

- A. The engineer must map the DRS VM groups directly to the vSAN Unicast Agent tables via CLI.

- B. The engineer must create a DRS "Host Group" containing ONLY the Preferred Site hosts (esx-01 through esx-03).
- C. The engineer must disable DRS Automation (set to Manual) to prevent VMs from accidentally moving to the Secondary site during daytime high CPU loads.
- D. The engineer must apply a "SHOULD run on hosts in group" DRS rule; this keeps the VMs on the Preferred site normally, but allows vSphere HA to violate the rule and restart them on the Secondary site during a total site failure.
- E. The engineer must apply a "MUST run on hosts in group" DRS rule for the VMs; "MUST" ensures that HA can strictly map the IPs during failover.

Answer: B,D

NEW QUESTION # 57

A CTO is designing a Disaggregated vSAN (HCI Mesh) topology for VCF 9.0.

[Architecture Diagram: HCI Mesh showing Compute-Only Client Cluster mounting a vSAN Max Server Cluster] The CTO applies a strict IOPS Limit: 1000 SPBM policy to the database VMs running on the Compute- Only Client cluster to protect the centralized vSAN Max backend.

Where and how does the HCI Mesh architecture efficiently enforce this IOPS Limit constraint? (Select all that apply.)

- A. If a VM generates 5,000 IOPS, the Compute-Only host throttles 4,000 of them instantly, ensuring only the allowed 1,000 IOPS are transmitted across the Datacenter Interconnect.
- B. The IOPS limit is forwarded as metadata tags to the vSAN Max Server cluster, which throttles the I/O at the NVMe device level (LSOM).
- C. The IOPS Limit is enforced strictly by the DOM Client running inside the hypervisor of the Compute- Only Client host.
- D. The IOPS limit dynamically adjusts standard vSphere DRS CPU allocation on the Client cluster to match the storage capability.
- E. IOPS Limits are strictly unavailable for remotely mounted datastores; policies must be managed at the vSAN Max local level.

Answer: A,C

NEW QUESTION # 58

A SOC Analyst is auditing the physical storage metrics in vCenter for anomalies. The analyst notices that "Witness Components" are consuming bandwidth on the cluster network but consume less than 0.001% of the NVMe drive space.

[vSAN Performance View > Component Breakdown]

Object: File-Server-VMDBK

Component 1 (Data): 500 GB

Component 2 (Data): 500 GB

Component 3 (Witness): 4 MB

Why does the vSAN Distributed Object Manager (DOM) actively generate and manage these 4 MB Witness components, and what rules govern their placement? (Select all that apply.)

- A. Witness components are automatically spawned by the CLOM whenever the number of Data components results in an "even" number of votes (e.g., FTT=1 Mirroring has 2 data copies). The Witness provides the 3rd vote to ensure a >50% majority can be calculated.
- B. The 4 MB capacity indicates standard LZ4 compression; if the VM experiences heavy write I/O, the Witness component will grow to equal the size of the data components (500 GB).
- C. Witness components are only generated in Stretched Cluster topologies; standard clusters do not require tie-breakers.
- D. A Witness component must NEVER be placed in the same physical fault domain as the Data components it is voting on; doing so would create a single point of failure that destroys quorum.
- E. Witness components contain zero virtual machine payload data; they consist purely of 4 MB of metadata used to track the latest Configuration Sequence Number (CSN) of the object.

Answer: A,D,E
