ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions (Q218-Q223):

NEW QUESTION # 218

While reporting a defect, which attribute indicates the degree of impact that the defect has on the system?

- A. Description
- B. Priority
- C. Severity
- D. Status

Answer: C

Explanation:

In defect reporting, the attribute that indicates the degree of impact that the defect has on the system is the severity. Severity reflects the seriousness of the defect in terms of its impact on the operation of the system, ranging from minor issues that do not significantly affect the system's functionality to critical defects that can cause system failure. Therefore, option C is the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 219

You are a test manager responsible for implementing risk-based testing in your organization which deals with software in the healthcare domain. You are writing a handbook of various product risk mitigation options. Which ONE of the following options correctly represent the correct mitigation options?

- A. Using a third party testing company to transfer the risk to that company
- B. Choosing a tool for automated unit testing to reduce the risks
- C. Selecting a tester with required knowledge related to compliance and standards
- D. Increasing the number of testers to be able to take care of all the risks

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 220

Which of the following statements about test reports are TRUE?

- I Test reports shall be approved by the test team.
- II. Test reports shall give stakeholders information as basis for decisions.
- III Test reports shall summarize what happened through a period of testing.
- IV. Test reports shall be approved by the development team, the test team and the customer
- V. Test reports shall include information about remaining risks.

- A. II, III, V
- B. II, III, IV
- C. I, II, IV
- D. I, III, v

Answer: A

Explanation:

Statements II, III and V are true about test reports. Test reports are documents that provide information on the results and status of testing activities for a given period or phase. Test reports should give stakeholders information as basis for decisions, such as whether to release the software product, whether to continue testing, whether to change the scope or priorities of testing, etc. Test reports should summarize what happened through a period of testing, such as what test cases were executed, what defects were found, what risks were identified, what issues were encountered, what achievements were made, etc. Test reports should include information about remaining risks, such as what defects are still open, what test cases are still pending, what functionalities are still untested, what uncertainties are still unresolved, etc. Statements I and IV are not true about test reports. Test reports do not need to be approved by the test team, the development team, or the customer, unless it is specified by the test policy or the test plan. Test reports only need to be reviewed and verified by the test leader or the test manager before being distributed to the intended recipients. Verified References: A Study Guide to the ISTQB Foundation Level 2018 Syllabus - Springer, page 141.

NEW QUESTION # 221

Which of the following is NOT a deciding factor in determining the extent of testing required?

- A. Budget to do testing
- B. Level of risk of the product or features
- C. Time available to do testing
- D. A particular tester involved in testing

Answer: D

Explanation:

The extent of testing required for a software product depends on various factors, such as the level of risk, the budget, and the time available. The level of risk reflects the potential impact of failures on the stakeholders and the environment. The budget determines how much resources can be allocated for testing. The time available defines the schedule and deadlines for testing activities. The particular tester involved in testing is not a deciding factor for the extent of testing required, as testing should be based on objective criteria and not on personal preferences or abilities. NEW QUESTION # 222

Which of the following is an INCORRECT statement about the benefit of traceability between the test basis and test work products?

- A. Traceability may make it harder to understand the impact of changes
- B. Traceability may be required by IT governance rules
- C. Traceability may help evaluate the extent of test coverage
- D. Traceability may allow testing to be auditable

Answer: A

Explanation:

The statement "Traceability may make it harder to understand the impact of changes" is incorrect.

Traceability in testing actually facilitates understanding the impact of changes by linking test cases to requirements. This linkage helps ensure that any changes in the requirements are adequately reflected and verified in the test cases, thus supporting effective management of changes and maintaining the integrity of the system or product being developed (ISTQB not-for-profit association) (ISTQB Main Web).
