Questions (Q103-Q108):

NEW QUESTION # 103

Richard was a cautious person, and he used to back up his organization's data daily at 8:00 pm. One day, due to a fire in his office building at 9:00 am, servers containing critical data were destroyed. It would take about 8 hours for Richard's organization to transfer the backed-up data from the alternate site to the primary site.
Based on the last data backup, the recovery time in this scenario is 'minus 13 hours'. What technical term best defines this time period of 13 hours?

- A. Single Point of Failure (SPOF)
- B. Recovery Time Objective (RTO)
- C. Maximum Acceptable Outage (MAO)
- D. Recovery Point Objective (RPO)

Answer: D

Explanation:
Recovery Point Objective (RPO) measures the data loss window, here 13 hours from the last backup (8:00 pm) to the disaster (9:00 am), not recovery time (8 hours). The 'minus 13 hours' phrasing is misleading; RPO is the correct term for potential data loss.
* Option A (RTO):Time to restore (8 hours), not data loss.
* Option B (MAO):Maximum downtime tolerance, not data-specific.
* Option D (SPOF):A failure point, unrelated to time.
* "RPO defines the time between the last backup and a disaster, indicating potential data loss, critical for planning" (Module: Recovery Metrics, Section: RPO Definition).

NEW QUESTION # 104

Which of the following clusters uses mounted file systems to read and write data?

- A. High-Performance Clusters
- B. High-Availability Cluster
- C. Failover Cluster
- D. Storage Cluster

Answer: D

Explanation:
A Storage Cluster uses mounted file systems to enable multiple servers to read and write data simultaneously to a shared storage pool, as described.
* Option B (High-Performance):Focuses on computation, not file systems.
* Option C (Failover):Switches to backups, not shared file access.
* Option D (High-Availability):Ensures uptime, not necessarily mounted file systems.
* "Storage Clusters utilize mounted file systems for concurrent read/write access, ensuring data consistency across nodes" (Module: Clustering Technologies, Section: Cluster Types).

NEW QUESTION # 105

Which of the following terms refers to the evaluation of the potential interruptions in the working of a department due to the failure of their internal systems?

- A. Country-wide BIA
- B. Organization-wide BIA
- C. Team-wide BIA
- D. Branch-wide BIA

Answer: C

Explanation:
A Team-wide BIA (Business Impact Analysis) evaluates interruptions specific to a department or team due to internal system failures, as described.
* Option B (Organization-wide):Covers the entire organization, not department-specific.

* Option C (Country-wide):Too broad, not system-focused.
* Option D (Branch-wide):Branch-level, not necessarily team/department.
* "Team-wide BIA assesses the impact of internal system failures on a specific department, tailoring continuity plans to team needs"
(Module: Business Impact Analysis, Section: BIA Scope).
