angiotensin I converted to angiotensin II by ACE in pulmonary vessels

angiotensin II:

- stimulates aldosterone secretion
- causes vasoconstriction

leads to reabsorption of Na/H₂O, rise of systemic BP restoring renal perfusion... all negative feedback that inhibits further release of renin

What produces ANP? Urodilantin? - myocardial atria urodilantin is similar to ANP and is secreted by kidney cells in response to increased renal blood flow.

Where is BNP produced? - ventricles

ANP and BNP are antagonist to what - RASS and stop secretion of aldosterone, renin, and AD and the action of angiotensin II

Thirst perception is regulated by: - 1. Osmolality receptors (cause thirst ex: dry mouth, plasma volume depletion)
2. Baroreceptors (stimulated by depleted plasma volume to cause release of ADH)

What does ADH (arginine vasopressin) do? When is it released? - - increases H₂O absorption by increasing permeability of renal tubules in collecting ducts of kidneys
- released with increased plasma osmolality, decreased circulating blood vol., decreased BP

What is osmolality? normal value? - Number of particles per kg of H₂O. Doesn't depend on particle size, just number of particles.

normal = 295

What does high/low osmolality indicate - low (less 295) = fluid overload

high > 295 = dehydration

What is a hypotonic solution? - a solution that has a lower osmotic pressure than another solution. Less solute, more water.

What is an isotonic alteration? cause? - Total body water change with proportional electrolyte changes.
