ISQI ISTQB Foundation Level - Acceptance Testing Sample Questions (Q31-Q36):

NEW QUESTION # 31

During usability testing, the ergonomic of the products shall be checked. Which one of the following usability testing techniques matches this test objective BEST?

- A. Walkthrough
- B. Log file analysis
- C. Checklist-based evaluation
- D. Biometrics - based evaluation

Answer: C

Explanation:

Usability testing aims to evaluate the ease of use, efficiency, and satisfaction with which users can achieve tasks. When checking the ergonomics (e.g., layout, visual clarity, interaction comfort), checklist-based evaluations are particularly useful.

Option A is correct because a checklist of ergonomic/usability heuristics (e.g., Nielsen's heuristics, ISO 9241 standards) allows evaluators to systematically assess whether the interface meets established usability criteria.

Other options:

B (Biometrics-based evaluation) tracks physiological responses (e.g., stress or eye movement), which are useful but indirect and less targeted to ergonomic checks.

C (Walkthroughs) help assess usability by observing task flows, but they are less focused on layout and ergonomic design.

D (Log file analysis) captures behavior but not directly ergonomic issues like spacing, font size, or element alignment.

A). Checklist-based evaluation

NEW QUESTION # 32

Which one of the following statements defines beta testing BEST?

- A. Beta testing is performed by developers at the customer's location.
- B. During beta testing, genuine users define the acceptance criteria for various realistic configurations.
- C. Beta testing takes place early in the development process to acquire feedback from the market.
- D. Beta testers discover defects in the product that escaped during the development process.

Answer: D

Which one of the following scenarios characterizes UX context analysis BEST?

- A. External conditions and psychological conditions are analyzed to derive design decisions
- B. Attractive solutions from competitors are analyzed to obtain inspirations similar products
- C. Users are categorized using personas to describe their physical and intellectual characteristics
- D. User behavior is described using use cases and business process models

Answer: A

Explanation:

UX context analysis evaluates the environment and conditions in which users interact with a product. This includes:

External conditions: lighting, noise, device constraints

Psychological conditions: cognitive load, stress, motivation

These factors influence usability, accessibility, and overall experience.

Option A is correct as it reflects the essence of UX context analysis - understanding the broader user environment to inform design and testing.

Other options:

B describes personas, which are user archetypes used for behavior modeling - more aligned with user profiling.

C focuses on competitor analysis - useful for inspiration, not context analysis.

D involves use cases and workflows - useful for behavior modeling, but not specifically context analysis.

A). External conditions and psychological conditions are analyzed to derive design decisions

NEW QUESTION # 34

Which of the following relations between business rule modeling and ATDD is correct?

- A. Business rules are described using the Gherkin language also used in ATDD
- B. By writing business rules models, stakeholders commit to the ATDD approach
- C. In ATDD business rule models are defined prior to business process models
- D. Application workflow models facilitate the generation of ATDD acceptance test cases

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Acceptance Test-Driven Development (ATDD), test cases are derived early and are based on business understanding. Application workflows modeled using BPMN or similar notations provide a clear, visual representation of how a user interacts with a system and which business rules are applied.

Option D is correct because these workflow models help define acceptance test cases by outlining the process paths, user interactions, and decision points. These visual models bridge the gap between business needs and testing.

Other options:

A is incorrect - business rule and process models are created based on need; one doesn't necessarily precede the other.

B is misleading - writing business rule models doesn't imply stakeholder commitment to ATDD.

C is incorrect - Gherkin is used for writing scenarios in BDD/ATDD, but business rules are typically modeled using DMN, not Gherkin.

D). Application workflow models facilitate the generation of ATDD acceptance test cases

NEW QUESTION # 35

Which one of the following statements regarding acceptance criteria is true?

- A. Acceptance criteria relate generally to some business goals and sometimes to some business needs
- B. For each requirement or user story, the acceptance criteria refine and specify how to test it
- C. Acceptance criteria are used to measure code coverage of the test object
- D. For each requirement or user story, the acceptance criteria refine and specify what is expected

Answer: D

Explanation:

Acceptance criteria define the conditions under which a user story or requirement is considered complete and acceptable to stakeholders. They clarify the expected behavior, outcomes, or attributes of the system.

Option C is incorrect because it accurately reflects that acceptance criteria are used to specify what is expected from the system in relation to a given requirement or user story. This ensures a shared understanding among developers, testers, and business stakeholders.

Other options:

A is vague and misleading - acceptance criteria relate directly to specific stories or features, not generally to high-level goals.

B is partially correct but limited - while acceptance criteria help define test conditions, their purpose is broader than just test specification.

D is incorrect - acceptance criteria are not related to code coverage, which is a technical test metric.

C). For each requirement or user story, the acceptance criteria refine and specify what is expected
