Which of the following should be the PRIMARY goal of implementing an IT strategic planning process?

- A. Optimizing IT resources to drive innovation
- B. Translating business needs into IT initiatives
- C. Determining benefits from IT deployments
- D. Directing business strategy to achieve goals

Answer: B

Explanation:

Translating business needs into IT initiatives. IT strategic planning is the process of defining how the IT function supports and enables the overall business strategy and objectives of an enterprise. It helps to align IT with business goals, optimize IT investments and resources, manage IT risks and opportunities, and deliver value to the stakeholders. By implementing an IT strategic planning process, an enterprise can translate its business needs into IT initiatives that are consistent, coherent, and feasible. These IT initiatives can include projects, programs, services, systems, architectures, policies, standards, and processes that address the current and future business requirements and challenges. Translating business needs into IT initiatives is the primary goal of implementing an IT strategic planning process, as it ensures that IT is responsive, relevant, and effective in supporting the enterprise's mission, vision, and values.
