EC-COUNCIL Computer Hacking Forensic Investigator (CHFI-v11) Sample Questions (Q30-Q35):

NEW QUESTION # 30

When marking evidence that has been collected with the aa/ddmmyy/nmm/zz format, what does the nmm denote?

- A. The sequential number of the exhibits seized
- B. The initials of the forensics analyst
- C. The sequence number for the parts of the same exhibit
- D. The year the evidence was taken

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 31

Zachary, a digital forensic analyst, is working on a cyber-espionage case involving an old workstation. The workstation used an Integrated Drive Electronics (IDE) hard disk drive which failed due to a power surge, rendering it unreadable.

Zachary believes the drive contains pivotal evidence that can aid the investigation. However, the workstation's motherboard also got damaged in the incident, and all of Zachary's available systems are modern and equipped only with SATA connectors. As a result, he can't directly connect the IDE drive to these systems.

What should Zachary do in this scenario to retrieve the data from the IDE hard drive?

- A. Zachary should try to repair the damaged workstation's motherboard
- B. Zachary should attempt to extract the platters from the IDE drive and place them in a working SATA drive.
- C. Zachary should send the IDE drive to a specialized data recovery service.
- D. Zachary should use a SATA to IDE adapter to connect the IDE hard drive to his modern systems.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Option A is the best answer because CHFI v11 specifically covers disk interfaces, understanding hard disks and SSDs, sources of potential evidence, and the methodology for choosing the best data acquisition method before evidence collection begins. When the issue is simply that the examiner's current systems have SATA connectors while the evidence drive is IDE, the most practical and forensically sound response is to use an appropriate adapter so the examiner can access the drive using modern hardware.

This approach aligns with CHFI's acquisition principles because it supports controlled evidence access while preserving the drive for imaging and analysis. Sending the drive to a specialized recovery service may be necessary only if the drive itself is physically damaged beyond ordinary access, but the question's main obstacle is the interface mismatch. Extracting platters and placing them into another drive is highly inappropriate and risks destroying evidence. Repairing the old motherboard is also unnecessary and less efficient when an interface adapter can solve the connection problem safely.

Therefore, based on CHFI data acquisition concepts and disk-interface awareness, the correct first choice is to use a SATA-to-IDE adapter.

NEW QUESTION # 32

Which of the following should a computer forensics lab used for investigations have?

- A. isolation
- B. an entry log
- C. restricted access
- D. open access

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 33

"In exceptional circumstances, where a person finds it necessary to access original data held on a computer or on storage media, that person must be competent to do so and be able to explain his/her actions and the impact of those actions on the evidence, in the court." Which ACPO principle states this?

- A. Principle 2
- B. Principle 3
- C. Principle 1
- D. Principle 4

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 34

What is the capacity of Recycle bin in a system running on Windows Vista?

- A. 3.99GB
- B. 10% of the partition space
- C. 2.99GB
- D. Unlimited

Answer: D
