Juniper Data Center, Associate (JNCIA-DC) Sample Questions (Q79-Q84):

NEW QUESTION # 79
Which two statements are correct about EVPN-VXLAN overlay networking? (Choose two.)

- A. It is the only option to provide reachability between servers that reside in the same network segment in a data center.
- B. OSPF provides the control plane within the overlay network.
- C. An encapsulation of the original packet is required to transport the packet across the network.
- D. BGP provides the control plane within the overlay network.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:
EVPN-VXLAN is an overlay technology used in data center networks to extend Layer 2 services over a Layer 3 network.
Step-by-Step Breakdown:
BGP Control Plane:
BGP (Border Gateway Protocol) is used as the control plane for EVPN-VXLAN. BGP advertises MAC addresses and IP address reachability information across the VXLAN network, enabling efficient multi-tenant Layer 2 connectivity over a Layer 3 infrastructure.
Encapsulation:
VXLAN (Virtual Extensible LAN) encapsulates Layer 2 frames into Layer 3 packets. This encapsulation allows Layer 2 traffic to be transported across a Layer 3 network, effectively creating a tunnel for Ethernet frames.
Juniper Reference:
EVPN-VXLAN Configuration: Juniper supports EVPN-VXLAN with BGP as the control plane, allowing scalable Layer 2 connectivity over a routed infrastructure in modern data centers.

NEW QUESTION # 80
When troubleshooting an OSPF neighborship, you notice that the router stopped at the ExStart state.
What is the cause of this result?

- A. There is an MTU mismatch.
- B. There is an interval timing mismatch.
- C. There is an area ID mismatch.
- D. The priority is set to 255.

Answer: A

Explanation:
When an OSPF (Open Shortest Path First) neighborship is stuck in the ExStart state, it usually points to a mismatch in Maximum Transmission Unit (MTU) settings between two routers trying to establish the adjacency. The ExStart state is where OSPF routers negotiate the master-slave relationship and exchange DBD (Database Description) packets.
Step-by-Step Breakdown:
OSPF Neighbor States: OSPF goes through several states to establish an adjacency with a neighbor:
Down: No hello packets have been received.
Init: Hello packets are received, but bidirectional communication isn't confirmed.
2-Way: Bidirectional communication is established.
ExStart: The routers are negotiating who will be the master and who will be the slave, and begin to exchange DBD packets.
Exchange: The routers start exchanging the database information.
Loading: The routers process the Link-State Advertisements (LSAs).
Full: The adjacency is fully established.
MTU Mismatch Issue:
During the ExStart state, both OSPF routers must agree on their MTU values. If there is an MTU mismatch between the two routers, OSPF neighbors will fail to move from the ExStart to the Exchange state. The router with the larger MTU setting will not accept DBD packets from the router with a smaller MTU because the packets may exceed the smaller MTU size.
In Juniper devices, this behavior can be identified by examining the MTU settings using the show interfaces command and ensuring both routers have matching MTU configurations. To resolve this issue, either match the MTU settings on both routers or configure OSPF to ignore MTU mismatches using the command set protocols ospf ignore-mtu.
Juniper
Reference: Junos Command: show ospf neighbor helps diagnose neighbor states.
MTU Adjustment: set interfaces <interface-name> mtu <size> can be used to set the MTU values correctly.

NEW QUESTION # 81

Which state in the adjacency process do OSPF routers check the MTU size?

- A. Done
- B. Init
- C. ExStart
- D. Exchange

Answer: D

Explanation:

In OSPF, routers exchange link-state information in different stages to establish full adjacency. The MTU size is checked during the Exchange state.

Step-by-Step Breakdown:

OSPF Adjacency Process:

OSPF routers go through multiple stages when forming an adjacency: Down, Init, 2-Way, ExStart, Exchange, Loading, and Full.

Exchange State:

During the Exchange state, OSPF routers exchange Database Description (DBD) packets to describe their link-state databases. The MTU size is checked at this stage to ensure both routers can successfully exchange these packets without fragmentation.

If there is an MTU mismatch, the routers may fail to proceed past the Exchange state.

Juniper

Reference: MTU Checking in OSPF: Junos uses the Exchange state to check for MTU mismatches, ensuring that routers can properly exchange database information without packet fragmentation issues.

NEW QUESTION # 82

What are two characteristics of a typical EBGP underlay fabric? (Choose two.)

- A. Each device in an EBGP fabric will be configured to be part of the same private AS.
- B. An EBGP fabric does not require an IGP to advertise loopback IPs.
- C. Each device in an EBGP fabric will be configured in its own unique private AS.
- D. An EBGP fabric relies on an IGP to advertise loopback IPs.

Answer: B,C

NEW QUESTION # 83

Which two statements describe an OSPF ABR? (Choose two.)

- A. By default, an ABR does not need to have any links in the backbone area.
- B. By default, an ABR is an OSPF router with all of its links in one area.
- C. By default, an ABR is an OSPF router with links in two areas.
- D. By default, an ABR must have one link in the OSPF backbone area.

Answer: C,D
