NEW QUESTION # 53

FortiSIEM provides all rules with the ability to automatically change an active incident status to auto-cleared, based on an extra set of defined criteria.

Why would you configure FortiSIEM to automatically change an active incident status to auto-cleared?

- A. Because you need a way to reduce a backlog of incident responses.
- B. Because some security-related incidents occur on a temporary basis.
- C. Because availability or performance-related problems may trigger a threshold temporarily.
- D. Because too many active incidents can spike the resource usage on FortiSIEM.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In FortiSIEM, some incidents may be triggered due to temporary threshold breaches, especially in availability or performance-related monitoring. These temporary anomalies do not necessarily indicate a persistent issue or security threat.

By automatically clearing such incidents, FortiSIEM prevents unnecessary manual intervention and reduces noise in incident management.

NEW QUESTION # 54

Which two statements about the maximum device limit on FortiSIEM are true? (Choose two.)

- A. The device limit is based on the license type that was purchased from Fortinet.
- B. The device limit is only applicable to enterprise edition.

- C. The device limit is defined for the whole system and is shared by every customer on a service provider edition.
- D. The device limit is defined per customer and every customer is assigned a fixed number of device limit by the service provider.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

FortiSIEM enforces a device limit based on licensing and system-wide constraints to ensure proper resource allocation and performance management.

The device limit is determined by the purchased license.

FortiSIEM licensing includes limits on the number of devices that can be monitored.

The license type (e.g., Enterprise vs. Service Provider) defines the maximum number of devices supported.

For Service Provider editions, the device limit applies system-wide and is shared across all customers.

In an MSSP (Managed Security Service Provider) setup, the total device limit applies across all customers, rather than being allocated individually.

This allows flexible resource allocation based on customer needs.

NEW QUESTION # 55

In the context of FortiSIEM, agents are primarily tasked to:

- A. Provide backup and restore capabilities.
- B. Act as a firewall and protect endpoints.
- C. Ensure smooth communication between different tenants.

Answer: D
