질문 # 311

A company that wants to achieve a goal of zero defects must have which of the following processes in place?

- A. 100% final inspection
- B. Internal auditors
- C. Customer satisfaction surveys
- D. Data-based management

정답: D

설명:

* Zero defects is an aspirational goal requiring rigorous and proactive quality management. It's not achieved through reactive measures like final inspection.

* Data-driven decision-making is fundamental to the CMQ/OE body of knowledge. A zero-defect approach demands collecting, analyzing, and acting upon data to identify root causes of errors and to drive continuous improvement within processes.

* Customer satisfaction surveys, while important, are feedback tools. They highlight issues but don't inherently prevent defects.

* Internal audits help assess process conformance but aren't the primary driver of zero defects.

Resource leveling is used to accomplish which of the following objective?

- A. Determining peak periods of a project's workforce overload
- B. Determining the resources of a project
- C. Shortening the length of a project
- D. Optimizing the use of a project's workforce

정답: D

설명:

Resource leveling is a technique used in project management to balance and optimize the allocation of resources (such as personnel, equipment, and materials) over the course of a project. The primary goal of resource leveling is to ensure that resources are utilized efficiently without overloading or underutilizing any specific resource. By smoothing out resource allocation, project managers can avoid peak periods of workforce overload and maintain a more consistent workload throughout the project duration. This helps prevent resource bottlenecks, reduces project delays, and enhances overall project efficiency.
