CWNP Certified Wireless Design Professional Sample Questions (Q147-Q152):

NEW QUESTION # 147

Given: The 802.11ac APs you have selected for your public access deployment support many of the PHY and MAC enhancements offered by the 802.11n and 802.11ac amendments. The AP is configured for a single-band (2.4 GHz) and only allows 20 MHz channels. The WLAN radio in the AP is a 3x3

802.11n chip that supports two spatial streams.

What is the maximum MCS rate that could be supported by this AP?

- A. 108 Mbps
- B. 54 Mbps
- C. 144 Mbps
- D. 65 Mbps

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 148

During a validation site survey, you discover that some access points (APs) have been mounted above the ceiling due to an aesthetic request from the building architect. However, no aesthetics constraints were communicated during the requirements gathering from the main stakeholder of the project. What is the appropriate course of action?

- A. Increase the output power on all APs by 6 dB immediately to accommodate for the additional attenuation
- B. Remove all external antennas and use only the internal antennas to reduce multipath and increase acquirer satisfaction
- C. Leave it as it is and allow automatic channel management to correct any issues
- D. Advise the stakeholder that WLAN performance requirements will not be met and a new design process will be needed to meet the requirements

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 149

What is the most cost-effective way to accurately measure the height of a ceiling when the use of a ladder is not permitted?

- A. Rent a lift-cart to lift you up to the ceiling
- B. Estimate the height based on known object sizes
- C. Gather measurements from other objects and do the math
- D. Use a laser measure to measure the distance from the floor to the ceiling

Answer: D

Explanation:

In scenarios where physical access to the ceiling is restricted, such as when ladders are not permitted, using a laser distance measurer is the most accurate and cost-effective method to determine ceiling height. Laser measurers provide precise distance readings by emitting a laser beam to the target surface and calculating the time it takes for the reflection to return. This tool eliminates the need for estimations or indirect calculations, ensuring accurate measurements essential for WLAN design.

You captured the frame showing an incorrect FCS. This frame is typical of those that were captured by the analyzer.

What does this frame reveal about the RF network in this area?

- A. One station seems to be streaming video, thus may have reserved significant bandwidth via admission control
- B. Multipath or excessive collisions seem to be an issue in this area
- C. The AP seems to be too far to provide enough coverage to this area
- D. Contention Free is in place in this network, which may starve some non-QoS stations from access
