NEW QUESTION # 284

Refer to the exhibit.

Internet Address	Physical Address	Type
192.168.1.10	d8-a7-56-d7-19-ea	dynamic
192.168.1.67	d8-a7-56-d7-19-ea	dynamic
192.168.1.1	01-00-5e-00-00-16	static

What is occurring in this network?

- A. DNS cache poisoning
- B. MAC flooding attack
- C. ARP cache poisoning
- D. MAC address table overflow

Answer: B

Explanation:

The exhibit shows a network diagram with a switch, a router, and two hosts. The switch has a MAC address table that maps the MAC addresses of the connected devices to the corresponding ports. A MAC flooding attack is a type of attack that aims to overload the switch's MAC address table by sending a large number of frames with spoofed source MAC addresses. This causes the switch to enter a fail-open mode, where it broadcasts all incoming frames to all ports, effectively turning it into a hub. This allows the attacker to sniff the traffic between the hosts and the router, or launch other attacks such as ARP spoofing or man-in-the-middle.

What is the potential threat identified in this Stealthwatch dashboard?

- A. Traffic to 152.46.6.149 is being denied by an Advanced Network Control policy.
- B. Host 10.201.3.149 is receiving almost 19 times more data than is being sent to host 152.46.6.91.
- C. Host 10.201.3.149 is sending data to 152.46.6.91 using TCP/443.
- D. Host 152.46.6.91 is being identified as a watchlist country for data transfer.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The exhibit shows a Stealthwatch dashboard displaying information on alarming hosts, alarms by type, and today's alarms. On the left side under "Top Alarming Hosts," there are five host IP addresses listed with their respective categories indicating different types of alerts including 'Data Hoarding' and 'Exfiltration.' In "Alarms by Type" section at center top part of image shows bar graphs representing various alarm types including 'Crypto Violation' with their respective counts. On right side under "Today's Alarms," there's a table showing the details of each alarm such as the host IP, the alarm type, the severity, and the time. The potential threat identified in this dashboard is that host 10.201.3.149 is receiving almost 19 times more data than is being sent to host 152.46.6.91, which is a sign of data exfiltration. Data exfiltration is the unauthorized transfer of data from a compromised system to an external destination, such as a command and control server or a malicious actor. This can result in data loss, breach of confidentiality, and damage to the organization's reputation and assets.

NEW QUESTION # 286

An engineer is analyzing a recent breach where confidential documents were altered and stolen by the receptionist. Further analysis shows that the threat actor connected an external USB device to bypass security restrictions and steal data. The engineer could not find an external USB device. Which piece of information must an engineer use for attribution in an investigation?

- A. list of security restrictions and privileges boundaries bypassed
- B. receptionist and the actions performed
- C. external USB device
- D. stolen data and its criticality assessment

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the context of a cybersecurity breach, attribution involves identifying the responsible party. Since the external USB device was not found, the focus shifts to the actions performed by the receptionist. Analyzing these actions can provide insights into how the breach occurred and may help in attributing the incident to the threat actor
