NEW QUESTION # 112

Available Choices (select all choices that are correct)

- A. IACS becoming integrated with business and enterprise systems
- B. IACS developing into a network of air-gapped systems
- C. IACS evolving into a number of closed proprietary systems
- D. IACS using equipment designed for measurement and control

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 113

How should patching be approached within an organization?

- A. Only after a cyberattack has occurred
- B. By ignoring downtime and costs
- C. As part of the broader risk management strategy
- D. As a purely technical task with no business implications

Answer: C

Explanation:

ISA/IEC 62443 treats patch management as a risk-based organizational process, not a reactive or purely technical activity. Within 62443-2-1 and related asset owner requirements, patching is explicitly linked to risk assessment, operational impact, safety, and availability.

Step 1: Risk-based decision making

Patches introduce both benefits (vulnerability mitigation) and risks (downtime, instability, safety impact). ISA

/IEC 62443 requires asset owners to evaluate patches based on their contribution to reducing cybersecurity risk while considering operational constraints.

Step 2: Integration into management processes

Patch management is part of configuration management, change management, and incident prevention. This ensures patches are tested, scheduled, approved, and deployed in a controlled manner consistent with business priorities.

Step 3: Avoiding incorrect approaches

* Ignoring downtime and cost violates availability and safety objectives.

* Waiting until after an attack contradicts preventive risk management.

* Treating patching as purely technical ignores business, safety, and production impacts.

Step 4: Lifecycle alignment

ISA/IEC 62443 emphasizes that patching must be planned and executed throughout the Operate and Maintain phase as part of continuous risk reduction.

Therefore, the standard clearly requires patching to be handled as part of the broader risk management strategy, making Option C correct.

NEW QUESTION # 114

What is recommended to use between the plant floor and the rest of the company networks?

- A. Switch
- B. Router
- C. Firewall
- D. Hub

Answer: C

Explanation:

ISA/IEC 62443 recommends using a firewall to segment and protect the plant floor (Operational Technology or OT network) from the rest of the company's Information Technology (IT) networks. Firewalls enforce security policies by controlling and monitoring traffic, helping to prevent unauthorized access and potential threats from traversing between business and control networks. Hubs and switches do not provide security; routers may offer some basic filtering, but firewalls are explicitly designed for this purpose.

Reference: ISA/IEC 62443-3-3:2013, Section 4.2.3 (Use of network segmentation and firewalls); ISA/IEC 62443-3-2:2020, Section 4.4 (Zones and Conduits).

NEW QUESTION # 115

In the context of global frameworks, what does the acronym SDO stand for?

- A. Software Development Organization
- B. Standards Development Organization
- C. Security Development Organization
- D. Systematic Development Organization

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the context of international standards and frameworks, SDO stands for "Standards Development Organization." SDOs are organizations like ISA, IEC, ISO, and NIST, which are responsible for developing, maintaining, and publishing standards used globally for industrial cybersecurity and other domains.

Reference: ISA/IEC 62443-1-1:2007, Section 3.1 (Abbreviations and terms); official definitions in standards literature.
