ASET Ethics Examination-ASET Professional Practice Exam (PPE) Sample Questions (Q65-Q70):

NEW QUESTION # 65

Which of the following statements best describes what access members of the public have to hearings before the ASET Discipline Committee or ASET Appeal Board?

- A. Hearings are open to the public unless the Committee or Board orders otherwise.
- B. Hearings may be open or closed to the public, depending on the nature of the hearing.
- C. Hearings are open to the public.
- D. Hearings are closed to the public.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Self-regulating professions operate under a social contract where the government grants them the privilege to govern themselves in exchange for prioritizing public protection. A key tenet of this system is transparency. Therefore, under the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA), disciplinary hearings conducted by the ASET Discipline Committee or Appeal Board are, by default, open to the public. This ensures that the public can witness that the profession is holding its members accountable and administering justice fairly. However, this is not an absolute rule. The Committee or Board possesses the legal authority to order a hearing (or portions of it) closed to the public if doing so is necessary to protect highly sensitive information. This exception is typically invoked to protect the identity of a victim of harassment, to protect highly confidential medical records, or to prevent the disclosure of proprietary corporate trade secrets that might be discussed as evidence during the hearing.

NEW QUESTION # 66

What is the intent of professional regulation?

- A. To protect the public interest.
- B. To increase government control.
- C. To admit people to the profession.
- D. To differentiate a profession from a trade.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The single, overriding intent and justification for the legal regulation of any profession-be it medicine, law, engineering, or applied science technology-is the protection of the public interest. While admitting people to the profession and differentiating from unregulated trades are administrative outcomes of regulation, they are not the reason regulation exists. The government grants self-regulatory powers through statutes like the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA) because the work performed by these professionals involves highly complex technical knowledge that the general public cannot easily evaluate. Incompetent, negligent, or unethical practice in engineering technology can lead to catastrophic failures, financial ruin, environmental disasters, or loss of life. By regulating the profession through bodies like ASET, strict standards for education, experience, continuous development, and ethical conduct are enforced. This system ensures that the public can trust that individuals holding professional designations have the competency and ethical integrity necessary to perform their work safely and reliably.

NEW QUESTION # 67

In relation to the discipline process for ASET members, what does "professional member" mean?

- A. A student member of ASET
- B. A regulated member of ASET
- C. A retired member of ASET
- D. A member-in-training of ASET

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the context of the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA) and the bylaws that govern ASET's disciplinary procedures, exact terminology is crucial for determining legal jurisdiction. The disciplinary authority of ASET applies strictly to those who hold legal status within the organization.

While "professional member" is a term heavily used by APEGA to denote P.Eng. or P.Ge. status, within ASET's regulatory umbrella (and general legislative phrasing concerning individuals subject to discipline), it refers broadly to a "regulated member." A regulated member is an individual who has met the full academic and experiential requirements and is actively registered to use a protected title (such as Certified Engineering Technologist (C.E.T.), Certified Technician (C.Tech.), or Professional Technologist (P.Tech.)). Retired members, student members, and members-in-training (T.T.) belong to different membership categories with varying scopes of practice and regulatory oversight, but the core discipline process primarily targets fully regulated, practicing members who are providing services directly to the public.

NEW QUESTION # 68

One regulated member confides to another regulated member that he misrepresented himself on his resume to his present employer. In that resume, he asserted that he had been employed overseas for the last 12 months, when in fact he was unemployed. Which of the following statements best describes what, if anything, the other regulated member should do with this information?

- A. Encourage the member to be honest with the employer and, if the member does not comply, report the member to the employer.
- B. Ignore the information as any action could hurt the reputation of the member.
- C. Talk to the member directly and encourage the member to be honest with the employer.
- D. Encourage the member to be honest with the employer and, if the member does not comply, report the member to ASET.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The ASET Code of Ethics requires members to report hazardous, illegal, or unethical professional decisions or practices. Misrepresenting one's qualifications or employment history on a resume is a severe breach of professional integrity and constitutes unethical conduct, as it deceives the employer and potentially puts the public at risk if the individual lacks the required experience for a technical role. However, ethical guidelines generally encourage allowing the offending party the opportunity to correct their mistake first. The observing member should confront the colleague, explaining the ethical violation and strongly encouraging them to confess the misrepresentation to their employer. If the colleague refuses to take responsibility and correct the deception, the observing member has a paramount duty to protect the integrity of the profession. In this scenario, the correct escalation path is to report the unethical conduct to the professional regulatory body, ASET, rather than directly interfering with the employer. ASET has the legal authority and disciplinary mandate to investigate and penalize members for unethical behavior.

NEW QUESTION # 69

Which of the following types of members would be exempt from ASET's Continuing Professional Development Program?

- A. Association Council members
- B. Self-employed members
- C. New members
- D. Retired members

Answer: D

Explanation:

The ASET Continuing Professional Development (CPD) program exists to ensure that practicing technologists continuously update their technical skills to protect public safety and welfare.

Consequently, anyone actively providing engineering or applied science technology services-whether they are newly minted members (Option A), self-employed consultants (Option C), or even members sitting on the ASET Council (Option D)-must complete their mandatory CPD hours to remain competent in the current technological landscape. The only permanent exception to this rule is for Retired members. When a professional officially transitions to a "Retired" membership status with ASET, they legally declare that they have ceased all professional practice and are no longer offering technical services to the public or employers. Because they are no longer practicing, their potentially outdated skills do not pose a risk to public safety. Therefore, ASET formally exempts them from the ongoing CPD requirement while allowing them to maintain their honorary connection to the profession.
