Construction Specifications Institute Construction Documents Technologist Sample Questions (Q53-Q58):

NEW QUESTION # 53

Which of the following ensure that all systems work together effectively to meet the overall project performance goals?

- A. Field testing
- B. Inspection by architect
- C. Total project commissioning
- D. Safety testing

Answer: C

Explanation:

CSI describes commissioning as a quality-focused, systematic process for verifying and documenting that the facility and its systems meet the Owner's Project Requirements (OPR). Within commissioning types, Total Project Commissioning (also called whole-building or total building commissioning) is defined as:

- * Encompassing the entire facility, including building envelope, systems, and interfaces.
- * Ensuring that all systems and assemblies operate together as an integrated whole to achieve performance targets (energy, comfort, safety, functionality, etc.).
- * Involving activities from design through occupancy: reviews, tests, training, and performance verification.

Because the question specifically asks for the process that ensures all systems work together effectively to meet overall project performance goals, that description matches Total Project Commissioning (Option A).

Why the others are incorrect:

- * B. Inspection by architect - A/E inspections or observations confirm general conformance with the contract documents but are not a comprehensive performance verification process for all systems.
- * C. Safety testing - Focuses only on safety-related aspects, not on full integration and performance of all systems.
- * D. Field testing - Typically refers to testing of specific components or systems in the field; it is one tool within commissioning, not the overall coordinating process.

Relevant CSI references (no links):

- * CSI Project Delivery Practice Guide - commissioning chapter (systems & equipment, building envelope, and total project commissioning).
- * CSI CDT Body of Knowledge - sections on commissioning scope, objectives, and responsibilities across project phases.

NEW QUESTION # 54

What is the term used to describe the time it takes to procure an item on site?

- A. Estimated time of arrival
- B. Lead time
- C. Manufacturing time
- D. Procurement time

Answer: B

Explanation:

In CSI's project delivery and construction phase discussions, the time between ordering an item and its arrival on the project site ready for use is referred to as "lead time." For construction planning and scheduling, lead time is critical because:

- * It affects when submittals must be prepared, reviewed, and approved.
- * It determines when purchase orders must be issued to avoid delays.
- * Long-lead items (such as custom equipment, certain mechanical/electrical components, curtain wall systems, etc.) must be identified early so the project schedule can accommodate them.

Among the options:

- * Lead time (Option C) is the established term for this procurement interval.

Why the other options are incorrect:

- * A. Estimated time of arrival "Estimated time of arrival" (ETA) may be used informally in logistics, but CSI's scheduling and procurement discussions specifically use "lead time" for the planning parameter from order to arrival.

* B. Procurement time "Procurement time" is a generic phrase, not a defined CSI term. In practice, procurement may include internal approvals, budgeting, and other steps beyond the order-to-arrival period.

* D. Manufacturing time Manufacturing time is only one component of lead time (which might also include design, submittal, shipping, customs, etc.). It does not necessarily cover the full period until the item is on site.

Key CSI Reference Titles (no links):

* CSI Project Delivery Practice Guide - chapters on Construction Phase scheduling and procurement /lead times.

* CSI Construction Specifications Practice Guide - Division 01 scheduling and submittals, including handling of long-lead items.

* CSI CDT Body of Knowledge - "Construction Phase: Schedule, Submittals, and Procurement."

NEW QUESTION # 55

Which of the following participants is involved in the Integrated Project Delivery (IPD) method?

- A. Commissioning agent
- B. Inspector
- C. Contractor
- D. Authority having jurisdiction

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 56

Which party is usually required to maintain record drawings during the project according to the Project Delivery Practice Guide?

- A. Architect
- B. Contractor
- C. Authority having jurisdiction
- D. Owner

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract (CSI-based)

According to CSI's Project Delivery Practice Guide and CDT body of knowledge, the Contractor is typically required-by the conditions of the Contract-to maintain record drawings during construction.

These are sometimes called "as-built" or "marked-up" drawings.

CSI explains that:

* The Contractor must keep on site a current set of drawings and, as the work progresses, mark changes, deviations, and concealed conditions that differ from the original contract drawings.

* This responsibility is usually stated in the General Conditions and/or Division 01, and is part of the contractor's obligation to provide Project Record Documents at closeout.

* At the end of the project, these contractor-maintained record drawings and related record information are typically delivered to the Architect/Engineer and then to the Owner as part of closeout, but the party maintaining them during the project itself is the Contractor.

The Architect uses the contractor's record information to prepare formal record documents only if required by the contract, but the day-to-day updating and maintenance during construction is assigned to the Contractor in standard CSI-aligned practice.

Relevant CSI concepts (paraphrased):

* CSI Project Delivery Practice Guide - sections on "Construction Phase" and "Project Record Documents" explaining that the contractor keeps a set of marked-up record drawings during the work.

* CSI CDT Study Materials - topic on roles and responsibilities for record documents and closeout.

NEW QUESTION # 57

During design, in a design-build delivery method, what is the design-builder responsible for delivering to the owner?

- A. Geotechnical reports
- B. Record documents
- C. Construction documents
- D. Submittals

Answer: C
