NEW QUESTION # 24

Which of the following techniques is used to identify the elements and boundaries of the requirements architecture?

- A. Environmental scan
- B. Functional decomposition
- C. Scope modelling
- D. Interface analysis

Answer: B

Explanation:

Functional decomposition is a technique used to identify the elements and boundaries of the requirements architecture by breaking down complex processes or systems into smaller, more manageable parts. This method helps in understanding the system's functionality and the relationships between different components.

It allows business analysts to define a hierarchy of system functions and sub-functions, ensuring that all elements of the system are accounted for and that the scope of the project is clearly understood.

References: The concept of functional decomposition as a technique for defining requirements architecture is discussed in the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) guide, which serves as a standard for the practice of business analysis¹².

NEW QUESTION # 25

Which of the following activities are performed during the requirements life cycle management phase?

- A. Elicit Requirements
- B. Trace Requirements
- C. Prioritize Designs
- D. Maintain Attributes

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Requirements Life Cycle Management knowledge area includes the following tasks:

- Trace Requirements: analyzes and maintains the relationships between requirements, designs, solution components, and other work products for impact analysis, coverage, and allocation.

NEW QUESTION # 26

What technique is used to elicit business analysis information, including contextual understanding and requirements, by examining available materials that describe either the business environment or existing organizational assets?

- A. Document analysis
- B. Data flow diagrams
- C. Organizational modeling
- D. Functional decomposition

Answer: A

Explanation:

Document analysis is a technique used in business analysis for eliciting information by reviewing existing documentation. This can include analyzing current business documents, user manuals, and any other material that provides insight into the business environment or existing organizational assets. It helps in understanding the current state of affairs, identifying requirements, and uncovering areas for improvement.

References: The information about document analysis as an elicitation technique is supported by various resources, including the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) and other educational materials provided by the International Institute of Business Analysis (IIBA). Specifically, it is detailed within the techniques section of the BABOK guide 1234. It is a research technique that is used to elicit business analysis information with contextual understanding and requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 27

Which type of elicitation involves obtaining information by controlled test?

- A. Research
- B. Experiment
- C. Collaboration
- D. Interview

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the context of Business Analysis, elicitation through experiments involves conducting controlled tests to obtain information. This method is used to identify results based on tests run in a controlled environment, which can include proof of concepts, observational studies, and prototypes. It is a systematic approach to discovering requirements by validating hypotheses through experimentation. The information aligns with the descriptions provided in the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) and is further supported by resources that discuss various elicitation techniques, including experiments as a form of elicitation 1 .
