Adobe Commerce Developer Professional Sample Questions (Q26-Q31):

NEW QUESTION # 26
Which action, if any, can be taken to change the URL key of the product?

- A. The product URL key is generated automatically, so it cannot be changed.
- B. Use URL rewrite to map product id with the custom URL key.
- C. In the product admin form, under the Search Engine Optimization fieldset, the URL key can be set

Answer: C

Explanation:
The URL key of a product is the text that is used to generate the product's URL. This text can be set by the merchant in the product admin form.

The URL key of a product in Adobe Commerce can be changed in the product admin form under the "Search Engine Optimization" fieldset. Here, the URL key can be set or edited manually, allowing for customization beyond the automatically generated value. This field is typically used to ensure that the product URL is search-engine friendly and relevant to the product.

NEW QUESTION # 27

An Adobe Commerce developer is working on a Magento 2 instance which contains a B2C and a B2B website, each of which contains 3 different store views for English, Welsh, and French language users. The developer is tasked with adding a link between the B2C and B2B websites using a generic link template which is used throughout the sites, but wants these links to display in English regardless of the store view.

The developer creates a custom block for use with this template, before rendering sets the translate locale and begins environment emulation using the following code:

/ @var $this->_translate \Magento\Framework\TranslateInterface */
$this->_translate->setLocale($newLocaleCode);

/ @var $this->_emulation \Magento\Store\Model\App\Emulation */
$this->_emulation->startEnvironmentEmulation($storeId, \Magento\Framework\App\Area::AREA_FRONTEND);

They find that the template text is still being translated into each stores language. Why does this occur?

- A. startEnvironmentEmuiation() resets the translation locale to the one of the emulated stores, which overrides the locale the developer has set when the order of setLocate and startEnvironmentEmulation is used as displayed above.
- B. startEnvironmffntEmulation() SetS and locks the locale by Using the setLocale() Optional Second $lock parameter, i.e. setLocale($newLocaleCode, true), to override and lock the locale of the emulated store. If this is set and locked initially then the environment emulation will not be able to override this.
- C. setLocate() does not change translation locale after it has been initially set, the $this->_translate->emulate($newLocaiecode) method exists to temporarily modify this by pushing the new locale to the top of the current emuiatedLocales stack.

Answer: A

Explanation:
ThestartEnvironmentEmulation()method resets the translation locale to the one of the emulated stores, which overrides the locale the developer has set when the order ofsetLocale()andstartEnvironmentEmulation()is used as displayed above.
The correct way to achieve the desired result is to use theemulate()method to temporarily modify the translation locale. The following code shows how to do this:
PHP
$this->_translate->emulate('en_US');
// Render the template
$this->_translate->revert();
This code will set the translation locale to English before rendering the template, and then revert the locale back to the default value after the template has been rendered.
ThestartEnvironmentEmulation()method is used to emulate a different store view or website. This can be useful for testing purposes, or for developing features that need to work in different environments.
Theemulate()method is used to temporarily modify the translation locale. This can be useful for rendering templates in a specific language, or for testing features that need to work in different languages.

NEW QUESTION # 28

An Adobe Commerce developer is trying to create a custom table using declarative schema, but is unable to do so.

    <column xsi:type="int" name="entity_id" padding="10" unsigned="true" nullable="false" identity="false"
            comment="Entity Id"/>
    <column xsi:type="smallint" name="roll_no" padding="2" unsigned="true" nullable="false" identity="true" default="null" comment="Student Roll No"/>
    <column xsi:type="text" name="student_name" nullable="false" comment="Student Name"/>
    <column xsi:type="varchar" name="student_class" length="5" nullable="false" comment="Student Class"/>
</table>

What are two errors in the snippet above? (Choose two.)

- A. null is not a valid value for column (roll_no).
- B. Column (entity_id) does not have index. It is needed since attribute identity is set to false.
- C. Column (roll_no) does not have index. It is needed since attribute identity is set to true.

- D. Column (student_name) does not have attribute length.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:
The correct answers are A and C.
The errors in the snippet are:
* Column roll_no does not have an index. It is needed since attribute_identity is set to true.
* Column student_name does not have an attribute length.
Theattribute_identityattribute specifies whether the primary key of the table should be auto-incremented.
Ifattribute_identityis set totrue, then theroll_nocolumn must have an index. Thestudent_namecolumn does not have an attribute length, which is required for string columns.
The following code shows how to fix the errors:
XML

<table name="vendor_module_table">
<entity_id>
<type>int</type>
<identity>true</identity>
<unsigned>true</unsigned>
<nullable>false</nullable>
</entity_id>
<roll_no>
<type>int</type>
<identity>false</identity>
<unsigned>true</unsigned>
<nullable>false</nullable>
<primary_key>true</primary_key>
<index>true</index>
</roll_no>
<student_name>
<type>string</type>
<length>255</length>
<nullable>false</nullable>
</student_name>
</table>

Once the errors have been fixed, the table can be created successfully.

NEW QUESTION # 29
How can a developer prioritize a plugin's execution, if possible?

- A. The developer can use sortOrder property by specifying a higher value than the target plugin.
- B. The developer can use sortOrder property by specifying a lower value than the target plugin.
- C. This cannot be achieved as the plugins are always executed by their module's load order in app/etc/config.php file.

Answer: B

Explanation:
A developer can prioritize the execution of a plugin by using thesortOrderproperty within the plugin's declaration in thedi.xmlfile. Specifying a lower value for thesortOrderproperty gives the plugin higher priority, meaning it will be executed before other plugins with a higher sortOrder value. This allows developers to control the order of plugin execution, which can be critical for ensuring the desired outcome when multiple plugins are affecting the same method.

NEW QUESTION # 30
A Project Architect needs to add a new developer who needs to be able to push code in an Adobe Commerce Cloud project. No integration with a third-party repository provider is setup.
What two actions would be required to ensure the developer has access? (Choose Two.)

- A. The developer's email must be added under Users in the Cloud Project Web UI

- B. The developer's SSH public key must be added into a file named ~/.ssh/authorized_keys
- C. The developer needs to add SSH public key in the Cloud Account dashboard settings
- D. The Adobe Commerce admin user must be created and the developer's SSH public key must be added on their local system

Answer: A,C

Explanation:
To ensure the developer has access to push code in an Adobe Commerce Cloud project, the developer's email must be added under Users in the Cloud Project Web UI and the developer needs to add SSH public key in the Cloud Account dashboard settings. The Cloud Project Web UI is a web interface that allows managing and configuring Adobe Commerce Cloud projects and environments. The developer's email must be added under Users to grant them access to the project and assign them a role and permissions. The Cloud Account dashboard settings is a web interface that allows managing and configuring Adobe Commerce Cloud accounts and SSH keys.
