IBM watsonx Generative AI Engineer - Associate Sample Questions (Q357-Q362):

NEW QUESTION # 357

You are tasked with integrating third-party embedding models into a Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) system for document retrieval. Several models offer pre-trained embeddings that can be leveraged for a variety of downstream tasks.

Which of the following third-party models is designed for generating embeddings that capture semantic meaning and context, making it ideal for a RAG-based GenAI system?

- A. GPT-3 Embeddings
- B. WordNet
- C. BERT
- D. Naive Bayes Classifier

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 358

When debating the drawbacks of soft prompts in a generative AI application, which of the following is the most significant challenge compared to hard prompts?

- A. Soft prompts significantly limit the flexibility of the model because they are tied to specific tasks, unlike hard prompts which can generalize to various scenarios.
- B. Soft prompts offer simpler debugging processes because the learned embeddings are directly linked to specific model behaviors and outputs.
- C. Soft prompts require more human intervention during generation because they depend on predefined patterns and rules for guidance.
- D. Soft prompts introduce more complexity during the training phase, as the model must learn embeddings that are not inherently interpretable by humans.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 359

You are working on a Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) system where large-scale document retrieval is a critical component. To improve the efficiency and accuracy of retrieval, you need to store and query vector embeddings. Given that the system needs to handle billions of high-dimensional embeddings while maintaining low latency for search queries, you are evaluating the use of a vector database.

Which of the following databases would be the most appropriate choice for this purpose, and why?

- A. A document-based NoSQL database like MongoDB, utilizing full-text search capabilities.
- B. Relational databases with B-tree indexes.
- C. A graph database like Neo4j, which is designed for traversing relationships between data points.
- D. A vector database like Pinecone or Weaviate that supports approximate nearest neighbor (ANN) search.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 360

You are managing a generative AI model deployment in IBM Watsonx and need to implement prompt versioning to ensure traceability and reproducibility of model behavior over time.

Which of the following strategies best enables versioning of prompts during deployment?

- A. Storing prompts in a flat file system and manually tracking versions.
- B. Using a source control system (e.g., Git) to track prompt changes alongside model code.
- C. Disabling versioning for prompts since it is not required for generative models.
- D. Relying on model checkpointing to manage both model weights and prompts.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 361

You are testing a new version of a prompt template designed to improve the accuracy of responses from a generative model deployed on IBM Watsonx. After deploying the new prompt version, you need to ensure that it performs better or at least as well as the previous version.

Which of the following approaches provides the most reliable method for testing the performance of the new prompt template version?

- A. Test the new prompt in production without monitoring and observe user feedback to gauge performance.
- B. Run a series of A/B tests comparing the new prompt template to the old one, using a set of predetermined metrics, such as response accuracy and completion time.
- C. Replace the old prompt with the new one in the live system immediately to avoid confusion between prompt versions.
- D. Use a random subset of production data and test both versions in a local environment, as local tests always replicate the conditions of production.

Answer: B
