What is one benefit of moving from waterfall methods to Agile delivery?

- A. Ability to deliver value to customers earlier
- B. Ability to efficiently share designs with contributors
- C. Ability to easily manage requirements across teams
- D. Ability to support customer communications regularly

Answer: A

Explanation:

The key benefit of transitioning from Waterfall to Agile delivery is the ability to deliver value to customers earlier and more frequently.

Traditional waterfall approaches deliver value only at the end of long development cycles, increasing risk and reducing adaptability. In contrast, Agile uses iterative and incremental delivery, allowing teams to release small increments of working solutions regularly. This provides faster feedback loops, improves responsiveness to change, and enhances customer satisfaction.

From SAFe guidance:

"Agile delivery enables teams to deliver value continuously and early, ensuring that customer feedback can be incorporated to improve outcomes and minimize risk." Therefore, the correct answer is C. Ability to deliver value to customers earlier, as this encapsulates one of the main advantages of Agile over waterfall.

According to SAFe, what is the recommended first step of Iteration Planning?

- A. Analyze the team backlog
- B. Review the prior Iteration
- C. Facilitate a confidence vote
- D. Establish capacity

Answer: D

Explanation:

In SAFe, Iteration Planning is the event where the team determines how much work they can commit to for the upcoming iteration and aligns on the iteration goal. The recommended first step of Iteration Planning is to establish team capacity.

By identifying the available capacity (in person-days or story points) considering holidays, time off, or other commitments, the team ensures realistic planning and avoids overcommitment. This forms the foundation for selecting appropriate backlog items that fit within available capacity.

From SAFe guidance:

"Iteration Planning starts with establishing the team's capacity for the upcoming iteration. This ensures that the team commits to a realistic amount of work based on their availability." Therefore, the correct answer is D. Establish capacity, as it is the first and most critical step in effective iteration planning.
