NEW QUESTION # 235

- The Robot is installed on Machine A, which connects through RDP to Machine B.
- From Machine B another RDP connection is opened to Machine C, where the automation must be performed.

Which of the following scenarios is appropriate for the developer who wants to use UI Automation activities?

- A. UI Automation can be used and the following are prerequisites:
Machine A - install RDP extension.
Machine B - install RDP extension and RemoteRuntime.msi.

- D. UI Automation can be used and the following are prerequisites:

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

UI Automation is a feature that enables you to automate the interaction with UI elements on remote machines using native selectors. To use UI Automation in a scenario where multiple RDP connections are involved, you need to install the UiPath Windows Remote Desktop extension on the client machines and the UiPath Remote Runtime component on the destination machine. The extension allows you to identify UI elements on the remote desktop and send keyboard and mouse events to them. The Remote Runtime component enables the communication between the extension and the UiPath Robot service. In this case, Machine A and Machine B are client machines, while Machine C is the destination machine. Therefore, you need to install the RDP extension on Machine A and Machine B, and the Remote Runtime component on Machine C. (UiPath Studio documentation¹) References:

NEW QUESTION # 238

When should a static selector be used versus a dynamic selector'?

- A. When all the attributes or tags remain the same for each execution
- B. When a standard selector contains an attribute value that changes for each execution
- C. When a standard selector contains a tag value that changes for each execution
- D. When the selector needs to interact with different types of elements on the same page

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

A static selector should be used when all the attributes or tags remain the same for each execution. A static selector is a selector that has fixed values for the attributes or tags of the target element. A static selector can reliably identify the target element as long as the element does not change its properties or position on the screen. A static selector is suitable for simple and stable UI elements that have consistent and unique selectors. For example, a static selector can be used to click on a button that has the same name and ID every time the automation runs.
