Google Associate Cloud Engineer Exam Sample Questions (Q300-Q305):

NEW QUESTION # 300

You are planning to migrate a database and a backend application to a Standard Google Kubernetes Engine (GKE) cluster. You need to prevent data loss and make sure there are enough nodes available for your backend application based on the demands of your workloads. You want to follow Google-recommended practices and minimize the amount of manual work required. What should you do?

- A. Run your database as a StatefulSet. Configure cluster autoscaling to handle changes in the demands of your workloads.
- B. Run your database as a DaemonSet. Run the resize command when you notice changes in the demands of your workloads.
- C. Run your database as a Deployment. Configure cluster autoscaling to handle changes in the demands of your workloads.
- D. Run your database as a single Pod. Run the resize command when you notice changes in the demands of your workloads.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 301

You need to host an application on a Compute Engine instance in a project shared with other teams. You want to prevent the other teams from accidentally causing downtime on that application. Which feature should you use?

- A. Use a Preemptible VM.
- B. Use a sole-tenant node.
- C. Use a Shielded VM.
- D. Enable deletion protection on the instance.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Preventing Accidental VM Deletion

This document describes how to protect specific VM instances from deletion by setting the deletionProtection property on an Instance resource. To learn more about VM instances, read the Instances documentation.

As part of your workload, there might be certain VM instances that are critical to running your application or services, such as an instance running a SQL server, a server used as a license manager, and so on. These VM instances might need to stay running indefinitely so you need a way to protect these VMs from being deleted.

By setting the deletionProtection flag, a VM instance can be protected from accidental deletion. If a user attempts to delete a VM instance for which you have set the deletionProtection flag, the request fails. Only a user that has been granted a role with compute.instances.create permission can reset the flag to allow the resource to be deleted.
