NEW QUESTION # 135

What is the purpose of conducting a user acceptance test (UAT) during the implementation of Oracle Fusion Cloud Procurement?

- A. To evaluate the performance of the technical infrastructure.
- B. To determine the reliability and availability of the system.
- C. To test and validate system configurations.
- D. To assess the system's usability and functionality from an end- user perspective.

Answer: D

Explanation:

By conducting a user acceptance test (UAT), the project team evaluates the system's usability and functionality from an end-user perspective. UAT involves testing the system with real users, allowing them to explore and interact with the system to ensure that it meets their requirements and expectations. It serves as the final step to validate and confirm that the Oracle Fusion Cloud Procurement implementation is ready for production use.

NEW QUESTION # 136

Which of the following is a required setup to configure a Procurement Business Unit in Oracle Fusion Cloud Procurement?

- A. Define procurement business unit parameters.
- B. Configure inventory organization structures.
- C. Configure payment terms and methods.
- D. Define approval rules for purchase orders.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To configure a Procurement Business Unit, it is necessary to define procurement business unit parameters. These parameters define various settings and options for the business unit, such as default inventory validation organization, default accounting period, and procurement financials options.
