Appian Associate Developer Sample Questions (Q40-Q45):

NEW QUESTION # 40

You have two record types: ACME_Student and ACME_Class.
You need to add a many-to-many relationship between these two record types.
What should you do?

- A. Create a new record type with data sync enabled, then add a one-to-many relationship from each record type (ACME_Student and ACME_Class) to the new mapping record type.
- B. This relationship cannot be modeled using record type relationships.
- C. Add the relationship from either ACME_Student or ACME_Class, then select Many-to-Many under Relationship Type, and add the corresponding keys.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To establish a many-to-many relationship between two record types in Appian, you should create a junction or mapping record type that will handle the many-to-many association. This new record type should have two one-to-many relationships, one to each of the original record types (ACME_Student and ACME_Class). This setup allows each student to be associated with multiple classes and each class to be associated with multiple students.

NEW QUESTION # 41

You built a grid field with the data source as a query entity.
You want to add a search box to the grid using Appian's out-of-the-box functionality. You set the parameter of showSearchBox to "True", but the search box is still not appearing.
Why is the search box NOT appearing?

- A. The grid is on an interface that needs to be placed within a report object.
- B. The showSearchBox parameter only applies when a record type is used as the source in the data.
- C. The search box only appears when data is populated in the grid.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 42

Where can an Appian Developer connect with and share their expertise with other Appian Developers?

- A. Appian Knowledge Base

- B. Appian Learning Paths via Appian Academy
- C. Appian Community discussions

Answer: C

Explanation:

Appian Community discussions provide a platform for Appian Developers to connect with, share expertise, and learn from each other. The community is a vibrant space where developers can ask questions, share solutions, and discuss best practices related to Appian development. While Appian Learning Paths via Appian Academy and Appian Knowledge Base are valuable resources for learning and troubleshooting, the Community discussions specifically facilitate peer-to-peer interaction and knowledge sharing among developers.

NEW QUESTION # 43

You created and published a new process model.

The process model has a start form with two synchronous subprocesses with 40 and 66 nodes each. All nodes are chained from the start node through the subprocesses to the end node. After the tasks and subprocesses, there is a second User Input Task in which the user can confirm the entries and add a comment.

When testing as a normal Acme business user, you see that the confirmation screen is not shown to you.

What might be the reason for this behavior?

- A. The second User Input Task is assigned to the process initiator.
- B. The second User Input Task is assigned to the Acme business user group.
- C. The maximum number of activity chained nodes is exceeded and breaks.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Appian, there is a limitation on the number of activities that can be chained in a process, known as the "chaining limit." If a process model exceeds this limit, which includes synchronous subprocesses and their nodes, the process may break or not behave as expected. In this scenario, with two large subprocesses chained from start to end, the maximum number of activity chained nodes could be exceeded, resulting in the confirmation screen not being shown. Adjusting the process model to reduce chaining or using asynchronous patterns where possible can help mitigate this issue.

NEW QUESTION # 44

ACME Automobile uses Appian to manage their vehicle fleet. Vehicle records can have a status of either "active" or "inactive". Users are primarily concerned with active vehicles and want to see only those records by default when viewing the Vehicle records list. However, it is important for users to be able to see the unfiltered list of Vehicle records on demand to address occasional auditing requests from managers.

Which configuration supports the desired Vehicle record list behavior?

- A. Visibility on the Status column in the Vehicle record list set with conditional logic.
- B. A user filter for the status field with a default option corresponding to "active".
- C. A source filter set to exclude vehicles with status "inactive".

Answer: B

Explanation:

To achieve the behavior where users see only "active" vehicle records by default but can also view all records when needed, you should configure a user filter for the status field on the Vehicle record list. This user filter should have a default value set to "active", which will filter the list to only show active records initially. However, users will still have the option to adjust the filter to see all records, thus accommodating occasional auditing requests.
