NEW QUESTION # 446

A Windows administrator is creating user profiles that will include home directories and network printers for several new users. Which of the following is the most efficient way for the technician to complete this task?

- A. Authentication application
- B. Access control
- C. Folder redirection
- D. Group Policy

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

Group Policy is a feature of Windows that allows administrators to centrally manage and apply policies and settings to computers and users on a domain. Group Policy can be used to create user profiles that include home directories and network printers for several new users, as well as other configurations such as security settings, desktop preferences, and software installation. Group Policy can save time and effort for the administrator by applying the same settings to multiple users at once. Access control, authentication application, and folder redirection are not the most efficient ways to create user profiles that include home directories and network printers for several new users.

NEW QUESTION # 447

A user's Windows desktop has low disk space. A technician thinks some upgrade files were never removed. Which of the following tools should the technician use to correct the issue?

- A. diskmgmt.mac
- B. devmgmt.msc
- C. cleanmgr.exe
- D. dfirgui.exe

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct tool to use for removing upgrade files and freeing up disk space on a Windows desktop is `cleanmgr.exe`, which stands for Disk Cleanup. Disk Cleanup is a maintenance utility included in Microsoft Windows designed to free up disk space on a computer's hard drive. The utility scans and analyzes the hard drive for files that are no longer of any use, and then removes the unnecessary files. It can delete temporary files, system files, empty the Recycle Bin, and remove a variety of system files and other items that you might no longer need.
