EC-COUNCIL EC-Council Disaster Recovery Professional (EDRP) Sample Questions (Q256-Q261):

NEW QUESTION # 256

Jack updated the operating system of his MacBook to the latest beta version. A few hours later, while working on his MacBook, Jack discovers that some of his installed applications are not working properly, and this may be due to the bug-ridden beta update. Hence, he decides to restore his MacBook to the previous OS version.
Which MacBook feature should Jack be using in this scenario?

- A. Time Machine
- B. Image Recovery
- C. Snapshots
- D. Time Shift

Answer: A

Explanation:

Time Machine is a built-in backup feature of macOS that allows users to automatically back up their entire system, including applications, system files, and personal data, to an external drive or network location. It enables users to restore their Mac to a previous state, such as before a problematic update, by selecting a specific backup point. In this scenario, Jack needs to revert his MacBook to the previous OS version due to issues with the beta update. Time Machine is the appropriate tool because it provides a user-friendly way to restore the system to a prior working state.

* Option A (Time Shift): This is not a recognized feature in macOS. It seems to be a fictional or misnamed option.

* Option B (Image Recovery): While image recovery refers to restoring a system from a disk image, it's not a specific macOS feature and is less user-friendly than Time Machine for this purpose.

* Option C (Snapshots): Snapshots are point-in-time copies of data, but in macOS, they are part of Time Machine's local backup system and not a standalone feature Jack would directly use to restore his OS.

* While EDRP focuses on enterprise disaster recovery, it covers backup and restoration tools like Time Machine under personal system recovery concepts, emphasizing the importance of regular backups for system restoration.

NEW QUESTION # 259

Which of the following is not a component of BIA?

- A. Formation of Committee
- B. Feedback
- C. Executive Sponsorship
- D. Safety

Answer: D

Explanation:

Business Impact Analysis (BIA) is a process to identify critical business functions and assess the impact of disruptions. Its components typically include executive sponsorship (to ensure leadership support), formation of a committee (to conduct the analysis), and feedback (to refine the process). Safety, while important in disaster recovery, is not a direct component of BIA, which focuses on operational and financial impacts rather than physical safety measures.

* Option A (Feedback): Essential for validating and improving BIA findings.

* Option B (Executive Sponsorship): Critical for resource allocation and authority.

* Option D (Formation of Committee): Necessary for collaboration and execution.

* EDRP v3 outlines BIA components, excluding safety as a core element, focusing instead on impact assessment and resource prioritization (Module: Business Impact Analysis).
