Cisco Certified Design Expert (CCDE v3.0) Written Exam Sample Questions (Q227-Q232):

NEW QUESTION # 227
When an SDN-based model is used to transmit multimedia traffic, which aspect should an architect consider while designing the network?

- A. Traffic patterns
- B. Flow forwarding
- C. Security
- D. QoE estimation

Answer: D

Explanation:
* A (QoE estimation): In SDN-based designs, particularly for multimedia traffic (voice, video, streaming), Quality of Experience (QoE) estimation is crucial to ensure end-user satisfaction. SDN can dynamically allocate resources based on real-time measurements of packet loss, jitter, delay, and other QoE indicators to maintain service quality.
Other options explained:
* B: Security is always important but not unique to multimedia design.
* C: Traffic patterns are part of capacity planning but secondary to QoE for multimedia.
* D: Flow forwarding is handled by the SDN controller but does not directly address multimedia quality.

NEW QUESTION # 228
An Agile for Infrastructure transition often means dismantling traditional IT hierarchies and rebuilding it to align with business objectives and workflows. Organizations are seeing the benefits of using automation tools in the network such as faster, more efficient, and more effective delivery of products and services. Which two components help increase overall productivity and improve company culture? (Choose two.)

- A. Agile code practices
- B. Infrastructure-as-code
- C. DevOps practices
- D. Dedicated infrastructure
- E. Controlled infrastructure

Answer: A,C

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Design Expert (CCDE) Agile practices and DevOps principles are foundational to infrastructure modernization. Agile enables iterative development, collaboration, and responsiveness to change, while DevOps unifies development and operations, fostering automation, monitoring, and continuous delivery. These elements improve not just technical efficiency but also cultural alignment across teams, boosting productivity and adaptability.
Infrastructure-as-code (Option B) supports automation but is an enabler-not a cultural component by itself.
Controlled and dedicated infrastructure reflects traditional IT models that lack agility and flexibility.

NEW QUESTION # 229
Which two actions must be taken when assessing an existing wireless network implementation for its readiness to support voice traffic? (Choose two.)

- A. Check for high channel utilization.
- B. Identify frequent TX power changes.
- C. Check for latency over wireless.
- D. Check for high roaming delay.
- E. Check for uniform radio coverage across the floors.

Answer: D,E

Explanation:
* A (Roaming delay):Voice requires seamless roaming with minimal handoff delay to avoid call drops.
* B (Uniform radio coverage):Consistent signal coverage is essential for maintaining voice call quality throughout the facility.
Other options explained:
* C: High channel utilization affects capacity but not directly the initial readiness assessment.
* D: Latency is important but typically captured during ongoing performance testing, not pre-assessment.
* E: TX power changes indicate instability but are not primary readiness criteria.

NEW QUESTION # 230
The Layer 3 control plane steers traffic toward destinations. Which two techniques offer a more dynamic, flexible, controlled, and secure control plane design in service provider networks? (Choose two.)

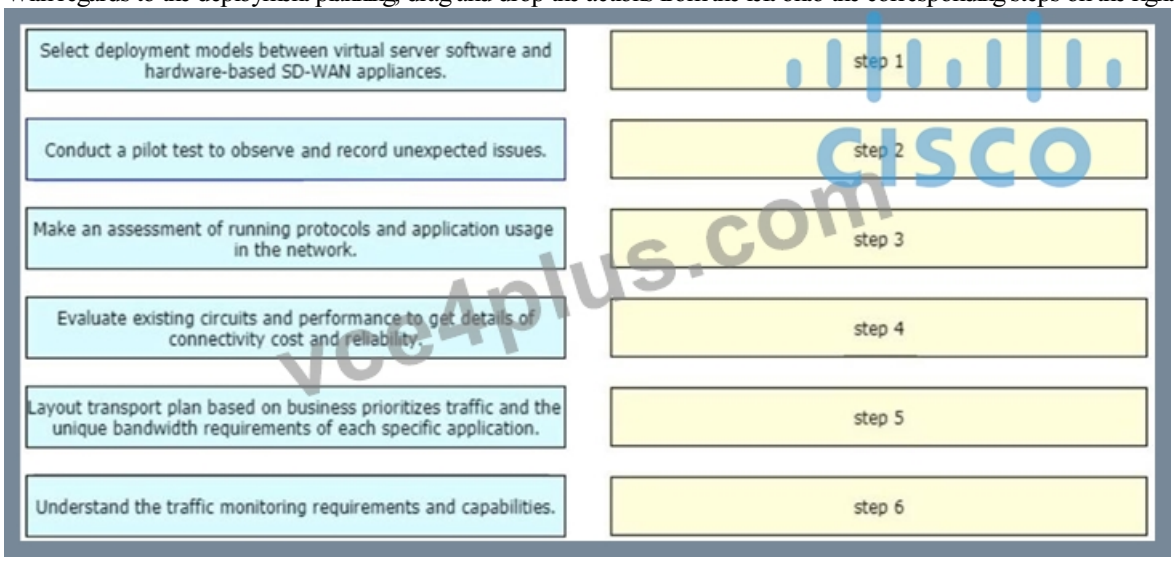
- A. Access control lists

- B. Prefix lists
- C. Remote black-holing trigger
- D. Firewalls
- E. QoS policy propagation with BGP

Answer: C,E

Explanation:
* C (QoS policy propagation with BGP - QPPB):Allows QoS policies to be dynamically applied based on BGP routing information, integrating policy control into routing decisions.
* D (Remote black-holing trigger):Enables dynamic mitigation of attacks (e.g., DDoS) by injecting blackhole routes through BGP to selectively drop malicious traffic upstream.
Other options explained:
* A/B/E: Static policy mechanisms that lack dynamic flexibility and responsiveness in modern service provider designs.

NEW QUESTION # 231
An enterprise organization currently provides WAN connectivity to their branch sites using MPLS technology, and the enterprise network team is considering rolling out SD-WAN services for all sites.
With regards to the deployment planning, drag and drop the actions from the left onto the corresponding steps on the right.



Answer:

Explanation:
