- A. Greenwashing
- B. Blue washing
- C. Bribery
- D. Corruption

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Documents:

The L5M5 study guide (p.258) explains that blue washing refers to organisations associating with the UN Global Compact to appear legitimate while failing to implement its principles. The term comes from the blue colour of the UN flag. In contrast, greenwashing (A) is when companies exaggerate their environmental credentials. NEW QUESTION # 40

An electronics manufacturing company aims to transition to a circular economy model by minimizing waste and maximizing resource efficiency. Which strategies would best support this shift?

- A. Focusing solely on increasing production to meet rising consumer demand
- B. Implementing a one-time recycling program for old devices
- C. Offering discounts on new products but not providing any take-back or recycling options for old devices
- D. Designing products for easy disassembly and refurbishment, allowing for longer product life and reuse of components

Answer: D

Explanation:

Choice A- While a recycling program is a step in the right direction, it is a reactive approach. A circular economy emphasizes proactive strategies such as designing products for longevity and reusability, rather than just recycling at the end of a product's life. option promotes sustainable practices by encouraging product longevity and resource recovery, making it the most aligned with circular economy principles. This approach minimizes waste by ensuring that products can be refurbished or repaired rather than discarded. It encourages a culture of reuse, which is fundamental to the circular economy model.

Choice C- This approach is contrary to the principles of a circular economy, which seeks to minimize resource extraction and waste. Increasing production often leads to more waste and environmental impact, rather than promoting sustainability and resource efficiency.

Choice D- While discounts can encourage sales, without a system to handle old devices, this option does not contribute to sustainability. It fails to address the issue of waste management and does not promote reuse or recycling, which are essential components of a circular economy.
