- D. Aggregate Product Type

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

to present the customer with all O-Ring purchasing options within a single product detail page, the company should use aggregate product type and attribute driven commerce functionalities. Aggregate product type allows you to group multiple products under one parent product and display them as variations on a single PDP. Attribute driven commerce allows you to create custom attributes that define product variations and enable customers to filter and select products based on those attributes. Therefore, options B and C are correct.

Option A is false because pricing tiers are not relevant for this scenario, they are used to offer discounts based on quantity or amount purchased. Option D is false because multiple price list items per product are not needed for this scenario, they are used to offer different prices for different customers or currencies.
