NEW QUESTION # 74
What does pre-boot protection prevent?

- A. Unauthorized passwords or alternative "forgot passwords" methods during pre-boot
- B. Unauthorized access to the Remote Help bypass tools or alternative boot technical support methods
- C. Unauthorized users using post-boot methods
- D. Prevents unauthorized access to the operating system or bypass of boot protection

Answer: D

Explanation:
Pre-boot protection in Check Point Harmony Endpoint's Full Disk Encryption (FDE) is designed to prevent unauthorized access to the operating system or bypass of boot protection. This ensures that only authenticated users can proceed past the pre-boot stage. TheCP_R81.
20_Harmony_Endpoint_Server_AdminGuide.pdfonpage 223, under "Authentication before the Operating System Loads (Pre-boot)," explicitly states:
"Pre-boot protection prevents unauthorized access to the operating system or bypass of boot protection." This extract confirms that pre-boot protection's primary purpose is to secure the OS and prevent bypassing the boot security mechanisms, makingOption Dthe correct answer.

* Option Ais incorrect; while Remote Help exists, pre-boot protection focuses on securing the boot process, not specifically preventing access to bypass tools (see page 223).
* Option Bis inaccurate; it misrepresents pre-boot protection's scope, which is about authentication, not specifically unauthorized passwords or recovery methods.
* Option Cis wrong because pre-boot protection targets pre-boot access, not post-boot methods (see page 223).

NEW QUESTION # 75
What information does the Endpoint Client provide end users?

- A. Overview summary of all machines and their status.
- B. Overview summary of traffic logs.
- C. Overview summary of the protections deployed on the machines and the status of each protection.
- D. Overview summary of security breaches.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The Endpoint Client provides end users with anoverview summary of the protections deployed on their machines and the status of each protection. On page 19, under "Endpoint Security Client," the guide describes it as an application that monitors security status and enforces policies, with components like Anti- Malware and Firewall listed on page 20, visible to users through the client interface. Option A is more relevant to administrators (page 63), Option C relates to forensic reports (page 346), and Option D pertains to network monitoring, not client-provided data.
