National Payroll Institute Payroll Fundamentals 1 Exam Sample Questions (Q42-Q47):

NEW QUESTION # 42

The source deductions form completed by all new employees in Quebec is called:

- A. TD1-AB
- B. T1213
- C. T2222
- D. TP-1015.3-V

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Quebec, employees must complete a Quebec-specific source deductions form so the employer can calculate Quebec income tax to withhold. Revenu Quebec identifies Form TP-1015.3-V (Source Deductions Return) as the form employees complete and provide to their employer/payer for this purpose. It is part of the onboarding /payroll setup process in Quebec and is used to determine personal tax credits and any additional withholding instructions for Quebec provincial income tax.

The other options are not the standard Quebec source deductions return for new employees: T1213 is a CRA form used to request a reduction in tax deductions at source (federal), TD1-AB is a provincial TD1 for Alberta (not Quebec), and T2222 is not the Quebec source deductions return. From a payroll communication standpoint, the employer should request both the applicable federal TD1 and the Quebec TP-1015.3-V, then retain them on file to support accurate withholding calculations.

NEW QUESTION # 43

Duncan Drapak was employed in Ontario. Upon termination of his employment, he will be paid $7,760.00 legislated wages in lieu of notice together with his final weekly pay of $875.00. Calculate Duncan's Canada Pension Plan (CPP) contribution if the yearly maximum contribution will not be exceeded.

Answer:

Explanation:

$509.78

Explanation:

Legislated wages in lieu of notice are treated as pensionable employment earnings for CPP purposes, so they are included with the employee's final regular pay when calculating CPP deductions (assuming no CPP exemption applies).

Step 1: Determine total pensionable earnings for the week:

$$7,760.00 + $875.00 = $8,635.00$

Step 2: Subtract the CPP basic exemption (Year's Basic Exemption is $3,500 annually). For a weekly payroll, the basic exemption is prorated:

$$3,500 \div 52 = \67.31

CPP contributory earnings for the week:

$$8,635.00 - $67.31 = $8,567.69$

Step 3: Apply the 2026 CPP employee contribution rate of 5.95% (base CPP). The question states the annual maximum will not be exceeded, so no capping is required in this calculation.

CPP contribution:

$$8,567.69 \times 5.95\% = $509.7777\dots$, rounded to $509.78.

NEW QUESTION # 44

Which of the following types of earnings are not considered income from employment?

- A. Commissions
- B. Severance pay
- C. Vacation pay
- D. Regular salary

Answer: B

Explanation:

Regular salary, vacation pay, and commissions are generally treated as income from employment because they are amounts paid for services performed during employment. In contrast, what many people call "severance pay" is often classified by the CRA as a retiring allowance—an amount paid when or after an employee retires or loses their job, in recognition of long service or for the loss of employment.

This distinction matters in payroll because a retiring allowance has its own rules for withholding and potential RRSP/RPP transfer eligibility, and it is not treated the same way as normal employment income earned while actively employed. CRA technical guidance also draws lines between amounts that are employment income versus retiring allowance depending on the nature/timing of the payment.

So, among the options listed, severance pay (when it is a retiring allowance) is the one that is not considered income from employment in the way salary/vacation pay/commissions are.

NEW QUESTION # 45

Which statutory deductions is salary continuance subject to?

- A. All deductions except Quebec Parental Insurance Plan premiums
- B. All deductions
- C. All deductions except Employment Insurance premiums
- D. All deductions except Employment Insurance and Quebec Parental Insurance Plan premiums

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 46

An employee has the use of a company-leased vehicle for both business and personal use. This is an example of:

- A. An expense reimbursement
- B. A benefit
- C. An allowance
- D. An earning

Answer: B

Explanation:

This is a benefit because the employer is providing access to an automobile (leased by the employer) that the employee can use for personal driving as well as business. The CRA explains that when an employer-owned or employer-leased automobile is made available for personal use, the employee receives a taxable automobile benefit, generally made up of a standby charge (availability of the vehicle) and potentially an operating expense benefit (if the employer pays operating costs and the employee has personal kilometres).

It is not an allowance (which is typically a cash amount given to the employee), and it is not an expense reimbursement (repayment of employee-incurred business expenses). It is also not an earning (pay for work performed). Payroll's role is to track availability days/months, business vs personal kilometres, any employee reimbursements, apply the CRA calculation methods, and report the taxable benefit on the employee's information slip with the correct taxable benefit treatment.
