Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 15

A set of automation scripts work with no issue from a local machine, but an experiment needs to take place with a new package found online. How is this new package isolated from the main code base?

- A. Create a new virtual environment and perform a pip install of the new package
- B. Create a new virtual machine and perform a pip install of the new package
- C. Perform a pip install of the new package when logged into your local machine as root
- D. Add the new package to your requirements.txt file.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To isolate a new package from the main code base, creating a new virtual environment is the best practice.

This allows for the installation and testing of the new package without affecting the existing code or dependencies. Performing a pip install of the new package within this isolated environment ensures that any potential issues or conflicts are contained. References :=
