- C. Cache content for: devices using custom local networks
- D. Cache content for: Only Shared Content
- E. Cache content for: devices using the same public IP address

Answer: C,E

- A. Recovery Lock is enabled

- B. Lockdown Mode is turned on
- C. FileVault is turned on
- D. Startup Security Utility is set to Full Security

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 163
Which is an important user authentication feature of an MDM solution that you should consider?

- A. Support for future versions of macOS, iOS, and iPadOS
- B. Support for the BYOD deployment model
- C. Support and integration with your identity provider or directory service

Answer: C

Explanation:
A key feature to consider in an MDM solution is its ability to integrate with an organization's existing identity provider (IdP) or directory service (e.g., Active Directory, Azure AD, or Google Workspace). This ensures seamless user authentication, leveraging single sign-on (SSO) and existing credentials, which enhances security and user experience. Support for future OS versions (option B) is important for compatibility but not specifically an authentication feature. Support for BYOD (option C) is a deployment consideration, not an authentication feature. The Apple Platform Deployment Guide highlights IdP integration as critical for authentication in MDM deployments.
