VMware vDefend Security for VCF 5.x Administrator Sample Questions (Q60-Q65):

NEW QUESTION # 60

Which one of the following is NOT one of the use-cases of Distributed Intrusion Detection and Prevention?

- A. Enable software-based IDS/IPS for Critical applications
- B. Provide routing capability for an air-gapped network to securely access the internet
- C. Prevent lateral movement of attackers by blocking vulnerabilities
- D. Achieve regulatory compliance requirements for PCI-DSS, HIPAA, SOX

Answer: B

Explanation:

VMware vDefend Distributed IDS/IPS is a highly specialized, software-based inspection engine designed specifically to detect and block malicious payloads (exploits) moving laterally (East-West) between virtual machines. Because it operates at the vNIC level, it is perfect for achieving regulatory compliance (Option D), protecting critical internal apps (Option B), and stopping lateral movement (Option C).

However, it is not a router. Providing internet access routing to an air-gapped network is a fundamental routing and NAT function (typically handled by a Tier-0/Tier-1 Gateway or a physical perimeter firewall), completely unrelated to the Deep Packet Inspection signature-matching functions of the Distributed IDS engine.

NEW QUESTION # 61

The VMware vDefend Management cluster is deployed by default with how many nodes?

- A. One
- B. Two
- C. Three
- D. Four

Answer: C

Explanation:

VMware vDefend (formerly NSX) architecture utilizes a Management Plane that is highly available. For production environments, the NSX Management cluster is deployed with exactly three nodes. This ensures high availability (HA) and fault tolerance for the management and control planes. If one node fails, the cluster maintains quorum and operations continue uninterrupted. While a single node can be deployed for lab or proof-of-concept environments, the default standard for a highly available production cluster is three nodes.

NEW QUESTION # 62

Which component plays a key role in enforcing distributed firewall policies across hypervisors in a private cloud environment?

Response:

- A. NSX Policy Manager
- B. vSphere Lifecycle Manager
- C. vSAN Data Plane
- D. vCenter High Availability

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 63

Which two practices are recommended when designing lateral protection strategies for segmented workloads?

(Choose two)

Response:

- A. Leverage security groups and dynamic membership
- B. Disable DFW logging for compliance
- C. Use DNS names in all firewall rules
- D. Define granular security policies per application tier
- E. Allow all intra-cluster traffic for performance

Answer: A,D

NEW QUESTION # 64

Which of the following are valid Network Traffic Analysis detectors in vDefend ATP? (Select all that apply)

- A. Password brute force
- B. Unusual traffic pattern
- C. Vertical port scan
- D. DNS tunneling

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

VMware vDefend Network Traffic Analysis (NTA) focuses on behavioral anomalies and advanced evasive techniques rather than simple, noisy, signature-based events.

DNS Tunneling (Option A): This is a highly sophisticated detector. Attackers often encapsulate stolen data or Command & Control (C2) instructions inside standard DNS queries (because DNS is rarely blocked by firewalls). NTA uses Deep Packet Inspection (DPI) to detect this anomalous payload hiding in port 53.

Unusual Traffic Pattern (Option B): NTA uses machine learning to baseline normal East-West traffic in your data center. If a web server that normally only talks to a database server suddenly starts transferring gigabytes of data to an unknown internal workstation, this detector flags the anomaly.

(Note: Basic password brute force and simple vertical port scans are traditionally handled by the standard IDS/IPS signature engines, whereas NTA focuses on deeper, protocol-level anomalies and AI-driven deviations).
