NEW QUESTION # 41

What is a common use case for batch data ingestion in Adobe RT-CDP?

- A. Low-latency personalization for email campaigns.
- B. Periodic uploads of customer transaction history.
- C. Real-time website interaction tracking.
- D. Identity stitching for cross-device activities.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 42

A data engineer is working on defining a data usage policy via automatic enforcement and has configured dataset labels C1 and C2 to enforce the restriction. The data engineer has set up the marketing actions, enabled the policy, and while activating audiences to destinations, realizes that the policy violations did not occur.

How can the data engineer ensure that the data policy is enforced successfully?

- A. Include the labels C1 and C2 in separate audiences upon activation
- B. Assign labels C1 and C2 to the schema rather than to the dataset during activation
- C. Exclude the labels C1 and C2 from any audience upon activation
- D. Include the labels C1 and C2 in the same audience upon activation

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 43

A data engineer needs to ingest batch data from a third-party customer relationship management (CRM) system into Adobe Real-Time CDP for a major holiday marketing campaign. What should the engineer check for in the initial stages of creating a manual dataflow when considering the batch ingestion framework?

- A. If the data complies with the legal aspects of Adobe Terms and Conditions
- B. If the target schema is already associated with the dataset in the dataflow
- C. If the dataset is configured to trigger the ingestion immediately after the creation of the dataflow
- D. If the file is in a supported format

Answer: D

Explanation:

When setting up a manual batch dataflow in Adobe Experience Platform, the first technical hurdle is ensuring that the source file is compatible with the platform's ingestion engine. Adobe Real-Time CDP supports specific file formats for batch ingestion, primarily Parquet and JSON. If the CRM data is exported as a CSV, the engineer must ensure it follows strict formatting rules or convert it to a supported format to prevent ingestion failures during the validation stage.

Checking the file format (Option B) is a foundational step because the ingestion service validates the file structure against the target XDM schema immediately upon upload. While the target schema must indeed be associated with the dataset (Option A), this is a step within the dataflow creation process rather than a preliminary check of the batch data itself. Option C is a legal/governance concern rather than a technical framework requirement for dataflow creation. Option D is incorrect because batch ingestion is typically scheduled or triggered manually; it is not a "trigger-on-creation" mechanism like streaming. Ensuring the file format is correct is the primary "pre-flight" check to guarantee that the mapping interface can correctly interpret the source fields for the marketing campaign data.

NEW QUESTION # 44

What is a best practice for designing a Real-Time Customer Profile in Adobe RT-CDP?

- A. Create a unified schema to include all data types and relationships.
- B. Avoid creating identity namespaces for customer data.
- C. Segment data into multiple unrelated schemas.
- D. Avoid enabling datasets for profile use.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 45

A marketer is looking to perform same page personalization for both known and pseudonymous users who visit the website. How can this client achieve same page personalization using both profile and event attributes for both known and pseudonymous users who visit the website?

- A. Known profiles can use same page personalization with edge segmentation, but pseudonymous profiles are unable to qualify for same page personalization.
- B. Known and pseudonymous profiles can use same page personalization with edge segmentation and streaming segmentation.
- C. Known and pseudonymous profiles can use same page personalization with edge segmentation.
- D. Pseudonymous profiles cannot qualify for same-page personalization in Adobe RT-CDP.

Answer: C
