NEW QUESTION # 68
For the best results in an Agile project, customers should:

- A. set sprint and release schedules.
- B. approve development plans and tasks.
- C. interview new team members for fit.
- D. set priorities and identify product features.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 69
An agile team provides feedback that user stories include insufficient details to understand the requirements.
What should the agile practitioner do?

- A. Instruct the agile team to fix the user stories during the next retrospective.
- B. Facilitate a user story workshop with the agile team.
- C. Inform the product owner's manager that the work items provide insufficient detail.
- D. Coach the product owner to update only the acceptance criteria.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 70
Why should an agile coach model agile principles and behaviors, become self-aware, and be present?

- A. To better listen, serve, and help the team grow their strengths individually and as a team
- B. To convince people what they need to do
- C. To understand team dynamics and develop a high performing team
- D. To help better disguise the command and control approach

Answer: A

Explanation:
The correct answer is A - To better listen, serve, and help the team grow their strengths individually and as a team.
An agile coach is a servant-leader whose role is to guide the team by modeling agile values, being present, actively listening, and helping teams grow. Coaching in agile is about enabling-not controlling-the team. A coach's mindfulness, authenticity, and presence inspire the same behaviors in the team.
PMI Agile Practice Guide notes:

"The agile coach models the agile mindset, including being present, self-aware, and aligned with agile principles. This helps the team build trust, foster collaboration, and grow capabilities organically." (PMI Agile Practice Guide, Section 6.2 - Coaching the Agile Team) Mike Griffiths emphasizes:

"Effective coaches guide by example. By modeling agile values and demonstrating presence, emotional intelligence, and listening, coaches help teams unlock their full potential." (PMI-ACP Exam Prep, Chapter 4 - Team Performance) Incorrect options:

* B suggests control rather than collaboration.
* C is anti-agile and contrary to the servant-leader model.
* D is valid but lacks the depth of A, which captures the coach's mindset and actions.
