Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

Database table

Data model view

Projection view

Service definition

Service binding

In RAP, the development flow follows a bottom-up approach, beginning with persistence and ending with OData exposure:

* Database table: The persistence layer where data is stored. This is the foundation of the business object model.

* Data model view (CDS entity): The CDS view is defined on top of the database table to provide a semantic data model. It represents entities like Travel or Booking.

* Projection view: Provides an abstraction of the data model view and controls which fields and associations are exposed externally.

* Service definition: Specifies which projection views (entities) are exposed in the OData service.

* Service binding: Connects the service definition to a communication protocol (e.g., OData V2 or V4), generating the final consumable service endpoint.

This sequence ensures a layered architecture consistent with RAP guidelines:

* Persistence layer # Data model layer # Projection layer # Service layer # Binding to protocol.
