NEW QUESTION # 356

Refer to the exhibit. Which device should be used to interconnect the hosts?

- A. Layer 2 switch
- B. VPN gateway
- C. load balancer

- D. Layer 3 switch

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 357

What is a benefit of using edge computing in an IoT implementation?

- A. low cost in network design
- B. high availability for network components
- C. low network design complexity
- D. high speed in data processing

Answer: D

Explanation:

Edge computing involves processing data closer to where it is generated (the "edge" of the network) rather than sending it to a centralized data center or cloud for processing. This approach reduces latency and bandwidth usage, providing high-speed data processing capabilities. It is particularly beneficial for IoT implementations where real-time processing and response are crucial.

NEW QUESTION # 358

What are two benefits of implementing common data structures when working with APIs in remote systems? (Choose two.)

- A. improves security in RESTful web services
- B. leverages code that is easily managed and reused
- C. enforces standardized data structures
- D. prevents multivendor interoperability
- E. ensures that developers are limited to using one data schema type

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Implementing common data structures when working with APIs in remote systems has multiple benefits:

Enforces standardized data structures: This ensures consistency and interoperability across different systems and APIs, making it easier to integrate and communicate between various components.

Leverages code that is easily managed and reused: Standardized data structures lead to more maintainable and reusable code.

Developers can build upon existing frameworks and libraries without having to rewrite data handling logic for each new API.
