- A. SCSI
- B. IDE
- C. SATA
- D. SAS

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 114

During an LCM upgrade, the `pre-check test_ahv_entering_mm_pinned_vms` pre-check fails on an AHV host. The administrator reviews the listed VMs and finds that:

- * One VM is configured as an Agent VM
- * Two VMs are running Windows Defender Credential Guard
- * One VM has a vGPU-enabled

Based on the behavior of this pre-check, which action is required to allow the host to enter maintenance mode and proceed with the LCM upgrade?

- A. Manually migrate the Agent VM and the vGPU enabled VM to a different node in the cluster.
- B. Enable DRS in the cluster to allow the VMs running Windows Defender Credential Guard to migrate.
- C. Update the VM-VM anti-affinity rules so that the Agent VM can migrate to a different host in the cluster.
- D. Power off Agent VM, Credential Guard VMs, and pinned vGPU-enabled VM and restart the upgrade.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 115

An administrator is troubleshooting intermittent VM I/O stalls that appear across hosts and clusters. The issue is sporadic, and the administrator needs to rapidly collect the correct platform logs for deeper analysis and possible escalation. The administrator wants to use a supported mechanism designed for efficient log collection, and must ensure the environment prerequisites are met so the tool can be used successfully.

Which option correctly describes the supported approach and a key prerequisite?

- A. Use Logbay to collect logs, which is available once the node has a CVM deployed or the AHV compute node has been added to the cluster.
- B. Use ADS to export diagnostic bundles automatically whenever built-in log collection function detects contention hotspots.
- C. Use Panacea to troubleshoot the incident, retrieving the required host and CVM logs directly, without first collecting a log bundle from the cluster.
- D. Use storage policy compliance reports and evaluations, include the underlying system logs needed to diagnose performance issues.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 116

An administrator supports multiple AHV clusters under Prism Central and uses Intelligent Operations playbooks for remediation. The organization recently standardized alert policies, but the alert policy names and IDs change between environments due to automated deployments and periodic updates.

The requirement is to trigger a remediation playbook for any alert that matches a defined performance pattern (for example, impact type and severity plus a keyword pattern), regardless of which specific alert policy generated it, while avoiding unrelated non-performance alerts.

Which playbook trigger best meets the requirement?

- A. Webhook trigger - configured so an external system calls the playbook endpoint only when performance incidents are detected.
- B. Event trigger - configured for a single event type so the playbook triggers when that event type is generated for the selected entities.
- C. Alert trigger - configured to a single alert policy so the playbook triggers only when that specific policy generates an alert.
- D. Alerts Matching Criteria trigger - configured with the required alert filters so the playbook triggers for any alert meeting the criteria.

Answer: D
