32. Frage

Describe the key principles of the Taylorism school of thought on Management (20 points)

Antwort:

Begründung:

See the Explanation for Detailed Answer

Explanation:

The Taylorism school of thought, also known as Scientific Management, was developed by Frederick Winslow Taylor in the early 20th century. It aimed to improve efficiency and productivity by applying systematic, scientific methods to the management of work. Its key principles can be summarised as follows.

The first principle is the scientific study of work. Taylor rejected traditional "rule of thumb" methods, instead advocating time-and-motion studies to identify the most efficient way of completing tasks. This broke jobs into smaller, measurable steps.

Secondly, Taylor emphasised the division of labour and specialisation. Workers should focus on narrowly defined tasks, allowing them to become faster and more efficient, similar to parts in a machine.

Thirdly, he argued for scientific selection and training of workers. Instead of leaving workers to train themselves, managers should select the right person for the job and provide formal training in the "one best way" to complete tasks.

Fourthly, Taylor stressed managerial control and supervision. He believed management should plan, organise and set methods, while workers should focus on carrying them out. This created a strong separation between planning and execution.

Finally, Taylor promoted financial incentives as motivators. He assumed that workers are primarily motivated by pay, so piece-rate systems and performance-based rewards were used to encourage higher output.

Taylorism brought many benefits, such as increased productivity, efficiency, and predictability in mass production industries.

However, it also attracted criticism for treating workers like machines, reducing autonomy, and ignoring social and psychological needs. From a modern procurement perspective, its ideas are still visible in standardised processes such as purchase-to-pay systems, KPIs, and efficiency-driven shared services. However, organisations today often balance these principles with more human-centred approaches to motivation and teamwork.

In conclusion, the key principles of Taylorism were scientific analysis of work, specialisation, scientific selection and training, strict managerial control, and financial incentives. While its focus on efficiency shaped early management thinking, modern leaders must also consider motivation, empowerment, and adaptability to achieve sustainable success.

33. Frage

Explain the '2 factor hygiene theory' of motivation and how this can affect the motivation of employees within an organisation (25 points).

Antwort:

Begründung:

See the Explanation for Detailed Answer

Explanation:

The Two-Factor Hygiene Theory, developed by Frederick Herzberg, explains what drives employee satisfaction and dissatisfaction at work. Herzberg argued that there are two categories of factors that affect motivation.

The first category is Hygiene Factors. These are extrinsic elements such as pay, working conditions, company policies, job security and supervision. If these are poor or absent, employees become dissatisfied. However, their presence alone does not create motivation - they simply prevent dissatisfaction. For example, in procurement, if buyers do not have fair pay or adequate systems, they will feel frustrated, but improving pay alone will not guarantee enthusiasm or creativity.

The second category is Motivators. These are intrinsic to the job itself, such as achievement, recognition, responsibility, advancement, and personal growth. When present, these factors actively increase motivation and job satisfaction. For instance, giving a procurement professional ownership of a supplier relationship, recognising their success in a negotiation, or offering training opportunities can significantly boost motivation.

The impact of Herzberg's theory on motivation is significant. Managers cannot rely only on hygiene factors like pay and working conditions to motivate staff. These need to be in place to avoid dissatisfaction, but true motivation comes from providing meaningful work, opportunities for growth, and recognition.

In practice, this means managers should:

Ensure hygiene factors are adequate (fair pay, safe environment, supportive policies).

Focus on motivators such as giving responsibility, offering progression pathways, and recognising achievement.

Design jobs with variety and challenge, rather than only repetitive tasks.

Encourage intrinsic motivation through empowerment and involvement in decision-making.

In procurement and supply, applying Herzberg's theory could mean ensuring staff have reliable systems and clear processes (hygiene), while also providing opportunities to lead supplier negotiations, recognise cost savings achievements, or involve staff in strategic sourcing projects (motivators).

In conclusion, Herzberg's Two-Factor Theory shows that avoiding dissatisfaction through hygiene factors is not enough. Managers must also provide motivators to create true engagement and drive performance. For procurement leaders, balancing both sets of factors is essential for building high-performing, motivated teams.

34. Frage

Tania has recently been appointed the new manager of the Procurement Department at a toilet paper manufacturer. She will line manage a team of 8, who all perform different tasks and have a varying level of ability and knowledge. She has noticed that there has been no formal training provided to the team and that some people have been asked to complete tasks they do not feel comfortable with. Overall, performance and morale are both low. Discuss the importance of 1) embedding learning into the culture and 2) role congruence in this scenario (10 points). Describe actions that Tania should take to address the issues (15 points).

Antwort:

Begründung:

See the Explanation for Detailed Answer

Explanation:

Part A - Embedding Learning into the Culture (5 points):

Embedding learning into the organisational culture means creating an environment where continuous learning and development are valued and encouraged. In Tania's case, this is vital because the team has had no formal training, which contributes to low skills and low morale. A learning culture ensures employees feel supported in developing new abilities, reduces resistance to change, and prepares staff for future challenges. For procurement, this could involve training on negotiation skills, supplier relationship management, or e-procurement tools.

Part B - Role Congruence (5 points):

Role congruence means ensuring that an individual's skills, experience, and abilities match the tasks they are assigned. At present, some staff are being asked to complete tasks they are not comfortable with, which lowers confidence and morale. Aligning people's roles to their capabilities improves job satisfaction, builds confidence, and enhances performance. For example, a staff member skilled in analysis should be allocated spend analysis tasks, rather than being pushed into high-pressure supplier negotiations without support.

Part C - Actions Tania Should Take (15 points):

Training and development programmes - introduce structured training to close knowledge gaps and give staff confidence in their roles.

Role review and alignment - assess individual skills and reassign tasks to match strengths, ensuring role congruence.

Mentoring and coaching - pair experienced staff with less experienced members to support learning and build capability.

Encourage continuous learning - build learning into team culture through workshops, lunch-and-learns, and reflection sessions after projects.

Regular performance reviews - provide feedback, set development goals, and celebrate progress to improve motivation.

Empowerment and involvement - involve staff in identifying training needs and improvement ideas to increase ownership.

Recognition and morale building - acknowledge achievements to rebuild confidence and team spirit.

Conclusion:

Embedding learning into the culture ensures that development is continuous, reducing skills gaps and raising confidence. Role congruence ensures that tasks match people's abilities, improving morale and performance. For Tania, focusing on training, role alignment, coaching, and recognition will rebuild her procurement team into a skilled, motivated, and high-performing unit.

35. Frage

Describe four types of culture that can exist within an organisation (20 points)

Antwort:

Begründung:

See the Explanation for Detailed Answer

Explanation:

Organisational culture refers to the shared values, beliefs, norms and behaviours that shape "the way things are done" in a workplace. One of the most widely used models is Charles Handy's four types of organisational culture, which describe different ways in which organisations can operate.

The first is the Power Culture. In this type, authority is concentrated at the centre, usually with a strong leader or small group of individuals. Decisions are made quickly, and personal influence is key. This culture can be dynamic and decisive but may create dependency on the leader and limit employee autonomy. In procurement, a power culture might mean senior management unilaterally deciding supplier strategies without consulting the wider team.

The second is the Role Culture. Here, the organisation is highly structured with clear roles, rules, and procedures. Power comes from position rather than personality. Stability and order are prioritised, making it efficient in predictable environments. However, it can be rigid and resistant to change. In procurement, this culture might be seen in public sector bodies where strict compliance, policies, and audit controls dominate purchasing activities.

The third is the Task Culture. This type is project-oriented, with teams formed to solve problems or deliver objectives. Power is based on expertise, and collaboration is valued. It is flexible, innovative, and well-suited to dynamic environments, but can cause conflict if resources are limited. In procurement, task culture is often evident in cross-functional category teams formed to deliver strategic sourcing projects.

The fourth is the Person Culture. Here, the focus is on individuals rather than the organisation. Employees see themselves as more important than the structure, and autonomy is prioritised. This is rare in large organisations but can be found in professional partnerships such as law or consultancy firms. In procurement, a person culture may appear where highly specialised experts operate independently, sometimes resisting organisational control.

In conclusion, Handy's four types of culture - power, role, task, and person - each offer strengths and weaknesses. Effective managers must understand the prevailing culture in their organisation and adapt their leadership approach. In procurement and supply, recognising cultural influences is vital to building cohesive teams, aligning strategies, and driving ethical and sustainable practices.

36. Frage

Zarah is the Head of Procurement at a hospital. She feels that the Procurement Department is understaffed and due to the large volume of work she has decided to put together a business case to recruit one additional Procurement Assistant. Explain the process Zarah should complete in order to create this Business Case. (25 points).

Antwort:

Begründung:

See the Explanation for Detailed Answer

Explanation:

When preparing a business case for additional resource, Zarah should follow a structured process to ensure that the proposal is clear, evidence-based, and aligned with the hospital's strategic objectives.

The first step is to identify the need. Zarah must gather evidence to show that the current department is understaffed and unable to manage the workload effectively. This may include statistics on increased purchase orders, supplier contracts, delays, or risks caused by the lack of staff.

Secondly, she should define the objectives of the business case. In this case, the objective is to secure funding and approval for an additional Procurement Assistant to ensure efficiency, compliance, and risk management in hospital procurement.

Thirdly, Zarah must analyse options. The business case should not only present recruitment as the only choice but also consider alternatives such as outsourcing, redistributing workload, or temporary staff. Each option should be reviewed in terms of cost,
