ISTQB Certified Tester Advanced Level - Test Manager Sample Questions (Q133-Q138):

NEW QUESTION # 133

You are Test Manager for a project which is in the Test Implementation stage for the first planned iteration, creation of the initial Test Cases and required test data is progressing well.

The Test Strategy documents the Stakeholders view that small teams should collaborate together to create and test functionality which is to be released in iterations, with each release building on the success of the last.

Stakeholders are willing to accept the risks of a partly working system in the early stages. Delivery of working functionality (particularly around interfaces to third party systems and performance of back end databases) is the priority for the early releases. Which of the following test types would you select for this first planned iteration, in order to meet Stakeholders expectations?

- Usability testing
- Structural testing
- Functional testing of process flows
- Performance testing
- Business process testing
- Component integration testing

NEW QUESTION # 134

What is a "depth-first" risk-based testing technique? [1]

- A. Highest risk test cases are executed first
- B. Lowest risk test cases are executed first
- C. All risk items are tested at least once
- D. Non-functional test cases are executed first

Answer: A

Explanation:

A depth-first risk-based testing technique is a method of prioritizing and executing test cases based on the risk level of the features or functions to be tested. In this technique, the test cases with the highest risk are executed first, followed by the test cases with lower risks. This ensures that the most critical and likely areas of failure are tested thoroughly and early in the testing process. NEW QUESTION # 135

What test process is included as part of TPI Next? [1]

- A. Identify test execution
- B. Identify test environment
- C. Identify test conditions
- D. Identify test specification

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to TPI Next, the test process consists of four main phases: Test Strategy, Test Preparation, Test Execution and Test Completion. Each phase has several key areas that describe the activities and tasks involved in the phase. One of the key areas in the Test Preparation phase is Test Environment, which covers the identification, specification, realization and maintenance of the test environment. The test environment includes the hardware, software, network, data and tools that are required to perform the testing activities. The test environment should be aligned with the test objectives and the system under test, and should be managed throughout the test process. TPI NextTPI Next book Reference:
