NEW QUESTION # 36
A new CIO advocates an agile framework for new IT projects, but the team has reservations. How should the CIO ensure that the team will be aligned with this?

- A. Obtain executive team buy-in by conducting a meeting to present the advantages of agile principles and processes.
- B. Issue a memo of understanding that agile principles should be implemented for all new projects.
- C. Require all staff and management to attend agile training and adhere to its principles.
- D. Introduce agile principles and processes, then make the change an experiment to obtain buy-in.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 37
Members of an agile team are complaining that user stories are too large, taking multiple sprints to complete them. They say this way of working is becoming difficult to handle and it has been challenging to map relationships between stories. This situation is affecting the value delivery for the product owner.
What should the scrum master do to handle this situation?

- A. Organize user stories into epics.
- B. Replace user stories into features.
- C. Apply work-in-progress limits.
- D. Separate large user stories.

Answer: D

Explanation:
Large user stories, also known as "epic" user stories, can be challenging to manage and lead to difficulties in tracking progress and delivering value incrementally. The Scrum Master should work with the team to break down large user stories into smaller, more manageable pieces. These smaller stories can be completed within a single sprint, allowing the team to deliver value more frequently and with greater clarity. This practice aligns with Agile principles by ensuring that work is broken into digestible chunks that can be iteratively built, tested, and delivered.

NEW QUESTION # 38

The primary purpose of a Sprint retrospective is for the team to:

- A. Individually provide status updates on user stories in progress.
- B. Review stories planned for the next sprint and provide estimates,
- C. Demonstrate completed user stories to the Product Owner.
- D. Discuss what went well, what didn't, and ways to improve.

Answer: D
