83. Frage

A company should take which of the following actions to identify customer expectations?

- A. Fulfill customer needs for quality products
- B. Benchmark the competition
- C. Measure customer complaints
- D. Survey customers regarding satisfaction

Antwort: D

Begründung:

To understand customer expectations, organizations should actively engage with their customers. Conducting customer satisfaction surveys allows companies to gather direct feedback from their customers, identify their needs, preferences, and areas for improvement. By systematically collecting and analyzing survey data, organizations can gain insights into customer expectations and tailor their products and services accordingly. While other actions (such as measuring customer complaints, fulfilling quality product needs, and benchmarking the competition) are important, customer surveys provide a direct channel for understanding and meeting customer expectations<sup>1,2</sup>. - B. Quality costs as a percent of net sales
- C. Inspection costs as a percent of production costs
- D. Quality costs as a percent of overhead costs

Antwort: B

Begründung:

Detailed Explanation: Upper management is most responsive to quality costs as a percentage of net sales because this metric directly relates to revenue and profitability. Understanding the impact of quality costs on net sales helps management evaluate the return on quality investments and identify potential savings.

According to the BoK, using financial metrics that link quality to revenue and profit can effectively demonstrate the value of quality initiatives to senior leadership.

- A. 125%
- B. 67%
- C. 75%
- D. 150%

Antwort: D

Begründung:

The quality manager's recommendation involves spending $10,000 to eliminate product failures that currently cost the company $15,000 per year. To determine the expected return on investment (ROI), we use the formula mentioned above. The annual savings from eliminating failures are $15,000, and the investment cost is $10,000. Calculating the ROI yields a value of 150%, indicating a positive return on the proposed investment.

87. Frage

It is the team sponsor's responsibility to:

- A. Review and support the efforts of the team
- B. Coach members in tools and processes
- C. Set agendas and manage team meetings
- D. Help team members prepare presentations for management

Antwort: A

Begründung:

Detailed Explanation:

The correct answer is A. Review and support the efforts of the team.

A team sponsor is typically the senior person who provides organizational support, removes barriers, ensures alignment with business priorities, and reviews the team's progress. The sponsor is not usually responsible for running the team's day-to-day activities. Instead, the sponsor provides guidance, visibility, and backing so the team can succeed.

Why A is correct:

The sponsor's role commonly includes:

- * supporting the team's mission,
- * reviewing progress and results,
- * helping remove obstacles,
- * ensuring resources and organizational backing,
- * and maintaining alignment with strategic or operational objectives.

From a Quality Management Excellence perspective, team effectiveness depends on clear roles. The sponsor provides leadership support and organizational connection, while the team leader and facilitator handle operational team matters.
