On the ECC Queue, sensor records have a Queue value of _____ and probe records have a Queue value of _____.

- A. output, input
- B. ready, started
- C. started, ready
- D. input, output

Answer: A

Explanation:

On the ECC Queue, sensor records have a Queue value of output and probe records have a Queue value of input. The ECC Queue is the connection point between the instance and the MID Server, and it displays the input and output messages from and to the MID Server¹. A probe is a message that the instance sends to the MID Server to request information from a device or application². A sensor is a script that the MID Server runs to process the results returned by the probe³. When a probe is created, it is inserted into the ECC Queue with a Queue value of input, which means that it is waiting to be picked up by the MID Server⁴. When a sensor is created, it is inserted into the ECC Queue with a Queue value of output, which means that it is waiting to be processed by the instance.

Which choices are necessary to launch any pattern?(Choose two.)

- A. CI Serial Number Attribute
- B. Data Certification
- C. CI Classification
- D. CI Type

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

To launch any pattern, you need to specify the CI classification and the CI type. The CI classification determines the table where the discovered CI is stored in the CMDB, and the CI type defines the specific attributes and relationships of the CI. For example, if you want to discover a Windows server, you need to select the CI classification as `cmdb_ci_win_server` and the CI type as Windows Server. These choices are mandatory for any pattern, as they enable Discovery to identify and classify the CIs correctly.
