Sample Questions (Q79-Q84):

NEW QUESTION # 79

Your application is consuming from a topic configured with a deserializer.

It needs to be resilient to badly formatted records ("poison pills"). You surround the poll() call with a try/catch for RecordDeserializationException.

You need to log the bad record, skip it, and continue processing.

Which action should you take in the catch block?

- A. Log the bad record and seek the consumer to the offset of the next record.
- B. Log the bad record and call the consumer.skip() method.
- C. Log the bad record, no other action needed.
- D. Throw a runtime exception to trigger a restart of the application.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To skip a corrupted record and avoid failing the application, you must seek past the failed offset manually using consumer.seek().

This allows the application to resume consumption from the next offset.

From Kafka Consumer Error Handling Docs:

"On deserialization failure, you can catch RecordDeserializationException, log the error, and call seek() to the next offset to skip the bad record." A does not prevent re-processing the bad record.

C is invalid; there's no skip() method in the Kafka consumer API.

D results in service interruption - not ideal for resiliency.

NEW QUESTION # 80

To read data from a topic, the following configuration is needed for the consumers

- A. the list of brokers that have the data, the topic name and the partitions list
- B. any broker to connect to, and the topic name
- C. any broker, and the list of topic partitions
- D. all brokers of the cluster, and the topic name

Answer: B

Explanation:

All brokers can respond to Metadata request, so a client can connect to any broker in the cluster.

NEW QUESTION # 81

Which function does ZooKeeper offer in Kafka?

- A. Authentication
- B. Consumer group rebalancing
- C. Controller re-election
- D. Partition assignment

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 82

A client connects to a broker in the cluster and sends a fetch request for a partition in a topic. It gets an exception Not Leader For Partition Exception in the response. How does client handle this situation?

- A. Get the Broker id from Zookeeper that is hosting the leader replica and send request to it
- B. Send metadata request to Zookeeper for the topic and select the broker hosting the leader replica
- C. Send metadata request to the same broker for the topic and select the broker hosting the leader replica
- D. Send fetch request to each Broker in the cluster

Answer: C

Explanation:

In case the consumer has the wrong leader of a partition, it will issue a metadata request. The Metadata request can be handled by any node, so clients know afterwards which broker are the designated leader for the topic partitions. Produce and consume requests can only be sent to the node hosting partition leader.

NEW QUESTION # 83

What happens when broker.rack configuration is provided in broker configuration in Kafka cluster?

- A. Each rack contains all the topics and partitions, effectively making Kafka highly available
- B. Replicas for a partition are spread across different racks
- C. Replicas for a partition are placed in the same rack
- D. You can use the same broker.id as long as they have different broker.rack configuration

Answer: B

Explanation:

Partitions for newly created topics are assigned in a rack alternating manner, this is the only change broker.rack does
