- B. requirements classification schema.
- C. requirements allocation.
- D. requirements architecture.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Requirements allocation is the process of assigning requirements to solution components and releases to ensure that the objectives are met effectively. - A. Agreement by executive board members
- B. Amount of time needed to create new documents
- C. Number of customers and end-users affected
- D. Capacity of the requirements management tool

Answer: C

Explanation:

When evaluating changes to requirements, in addition to the schedule, it is crucial to consider the number of customers and end-users affected by the change. This factor is important because it directly impacts the value delivery and satisfaction of the stakeholders. The changes must align with the needs and expectations of the customers and end-users to ensure that the solution remains relevant and beneficial. Reference: This consideration is supported by the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) guide, which emphasizes the importance of stakeholder engagement and value delivery in the requirements management and communication knowledge area 1.

NEW QUESTION # 82

Which of the following items is commonly used by a business analyst (BA) during requirements verification?

- A. A user story with inputs and outputs
- B. A benchmarking report with industry comparisons
- C. A checklist with a standard set of quality elements
- D. A business model canvas with financial estimates

Answer: C

Explanation:

Business Analysts (BAs) commonly use a checklist during requirements verification to ensure that all requirements are consistent, complete, coherent, and testable. This checklist typically includes a standard set of quality elements that the requirements must adhere to. The use of a checklist helps BAs to systematically verify each requirement against these quality criteria. References: The BABOK Guide lists 8 characteristics of requirements quality: cohesive, complete, consistent, correct, feasible, modifiable, unambiguous, and testable. These characteristics form the basis of the standard quality elements included in a verification checklist.

NEW QUESTION # 83

(You are exploring the "Change" concept in the Business Analysis Core Concept Model (BACCM). What will this help you understand?)

- A. Who is impacted by or who impacts the change
- B. What to transform in response to a need
- C. The specific way to satisfy one or more needs
- D. The problem or opportunity to be addressed

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is B. In the BACCM, Change is defined by IIBA as the act of transformation in response to a need. Therefore, exploring the Change concept helps the business analysis professional understand what must be transformed in order to address the identified need. (IIBA) Option A is incorrect because the problem or opportunity to be addressed corresponds to the BACCM concept of Need, not Change. (IIBA) Option C is incorrect because the specific way to satisfy one or more needs corresponds to Solution, not Change. (IIBA) Option D is incorrect because who is impacted by or who impacts the change corresponds to Stakeholder, not Change. (IIBA)
