Upon integration, the engineer finds that mid-stream some of the data appears to be routed to a different Edge likely caused by a customer turning on/off a VPN.
How best would the engineer resolve this issue to ensure all data is always routed to the same Edge in the initiating session?

- A. Build a middleware service to catch and resolve these issues
- B. Enable cross-edge synchronization to resolve discrepancies
- C. Use location hints in their calls
- D. Use the Web SDK

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 54
A data analyst is trying to apply a series of complex conditions to filter audiences in Adobe Real-Time CDP for a client's online sale event. What would be the two recommended courses of action in terms of segment creation in this situation? (Choose two.)

- A. Use Computed Attributes for streaming use-cases
- B. Use Batch Evaluation Segments for complex expressions and longer look back windows
- C. Use Audience Export Segments for real-time personalization
- D. Use Rule-Based Segments for complex conditions

Answer: B,D

Explanation:
In Adobe Real-Time Customer Data Platform, selecting the right segmentation method depends on the complexity of the logic and the required lookback duration.
Rule-Based Segments (Option A)are the standard way to build audiences in theSegment Builder. They allow data analysts to drag and drop various attributes and events, using boolean logic (AND/OR/NOT) to create highly specific filters. This is the primary method for handling "complex conditions" involving multiple profile traits and behavioral events.
Batch Evaluation Segments (Option D)are specifically recommended when those complex expressions involvelong lookback windows(e.g., "purchased in the last 18 months") or require processing massive historical datasets that exceed the limits of the streaming engine. Batch segmentation runs on a scheduled basis (usually once every 24 hours) and performs a full scan of the Real-Time Customer Profile store, making it the most robust choice for high-complexity calculations that do not require millisecond-level updates.
Option B is incorrect as "Audience Export" is an activation step, not a creation method. Option C,Computed Attributes, are useful for simplifying segments (e.g., calculating a "Total Lifetime Value"), but they are a data preparation tool rather than a segmentation method itself. Using a combination of Rule-Based logic evaluated via the Batch engine provides the analyst with the most powerful toolkit for complex filtering.
