CWNP Wireless Network Administrator (CWNA) Sample Questions (Q86-Q91):

NEW QUESTION # 86

What security solution is required to be used in place of Open System Authentication for all open network 802.11 implementations in the 6 GHz band?

- A. Kerberos
- B. WPA3-SAE
- C. OWE
- D. WPA3-Enterprise

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 87

What frame type is used to reserve the wireless medium for the transmission of high data rate frames that may not be understood by all clients connected to the BSS?

- A. PS-Poll
- B. RTS
- C. ACK
- D. Beacon

Answer: B

Explanation:

The frame type that is used to reserve the wireless medium for the transmission of high data rate frames that may not be understood by all clients connected to the BSS is RTS. RTS stands for Request to Send and is a control frame that is sent by a station to request access to the medium for a specified duration. The RTS frame contains the source and destination MAC addresses, as well as a Network Allocation Vector (NAV) value that indicates how long the medium will be occupied. The destination station responds with a Clear to Send (CTS) frame that echoes the NAV value and grants permission to the source station. All other stations in the BSS hear either the RTS or CTS frame and update their NAV timers accordingly, deferring their transmissions until the medium is free. The RTS/CTS mechanism can be used to prevent hidden node problems, reduce collisions, and protect high data rate frames that use features such as 802.11n or 802.11ac that may not be compatible with legacy stations. ACK, Beacon, and PS-Poll are not used to reserve the medium for high data rate frames. References: [CWNP Certified Wireless Network Administrator Official Study Guide:

NEW QUESTION # 88

What is the final step in an effective troubleshooting process?

- A. Disable the WLAN
- B. Document the results
- C. Verify the solution
- D. Notify the users of problem resolution

Answer: B

Explanation:

The final step in an effective troubleshooting process is to document the results. Documentation is essential for keeping track of the problem history, the actions taken, the solutions implemented, and the outcomes achieved.

Documentation can also help to prevent future problems, improve best practices, and provide feedback for improvement.

Documentation should include relevant information such as problem description, symptoms, root cause analysis, resolution steps, verification methods, and lessons learned. NEW QUESTION # 89

Which one of the following channels can be used for VHT transmissions according to the 802.11 specification?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: A

Explanation:

The channel that can be used for VHT transmissions according to the 802.11 specification is channel 144.

VHT stands for Very High Throughput and is the PHY layer specification for 802.11ac devices. VHT transmissions can use channel bandwidths of 20 MHz, 40 MHz, 80 MHz, or 160 MHz in the 5 GHz band.

Channel 144 is one of the channels in the 5 GHz band that can support VHT transmissions with any of these bandwidths. Channel 6, channel 1, and channel 11 are channels in the 2.4 GHz band that cannot support VHT transmissions, as they are only compatible with legacy (802.11b/g/n), HT (802.11n), or ERP (802.11g) transmissions with up to 20 MHz bandwidth. NEW QUESTION # 90

What phrase defines Equivalent Isotropically Radiated Power (EIRP)?

- A. Power supplied from the transmission line to the antenna input
- B. The power output from the radio into the RF cable
- C. The highest RF signal strength that is transmitted from a given antenna
- D. The power output from the radio after cable losses

Answer: C

Explanation:

"Effective, or Equivalent Isotropically Radiated Power (EIRP) is the maximum amount of power that could be radiated from an antenna, given its antenna gain and the transmitter power of the RF system." Also: "Effective Isotropic Radiated Power or Equivalent Isotropic Radiated Power (EIRP) is the measured power radiated in a single direction by an ideal isotropic antenna. ... It is the antenna's maximum power output in the direction with the highest antenna gain."
