Microsoft Security, Compliance, and Identity Fundamentals Sample Questions (Q11-Q16):

NEW QUESTION # 11

What feature in Microsoft Defender for Endpoint provides the first line of defense against cyberthreats by reducing the attack surface?

- A. automated investigation
- B. advanced hunting
- C. network protection
- D. automated remediation

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Microsoft Defender for Endpoint, attack surface reduction (ASR) is described as the first defensive layer in the protection stack, and Network protection is a core ASR capability. Microsoft's documentation states that "Attack surface reduction provides the first line of defense in the stack." It further explains that these capabilities are designed to reduce opportunities for compromise before malware can run or persistence can be established. Within ASR, Microsoft specifically defines Network protection as a feature that "helps reduce the attack surface of your devices from Internet-based events." Microsoft also clarifies how it works: "It prevents employees from using any application to access dangerous domains that may host phishing scams, exploits, and other malicious content on the Internet." Because the question asks for the feature in Defender for Endpoint that delivers the first line of defense by reducing the attack surface, the applicable ASR capability is Network protection. It proactively blocks access to known malicious IPs, domains, and URLs, shrinking the exploitable surface area and thereby reducing risk before an attack can execute. By contrast, automated investigation and automated remediation act after detections to contain and fix issues, and advanced hunting is an analyst-driven, query-based detection and investigation tool-not an attack-surface-reduction control. Hence, Network protection is the correct choice.
