What type of change is often used for resolving incidents or implementing security patches?

- A. Standard change
- B. Emergency change
- C. Normal change
- D. Change model

Answer: B

Explanation:

- * A change that must be implemented as soon as possible without strictly following the standard process e.g. to resolve an incident or implement a security patch.
- * The process for assessment and authorization is expedited to ensure quick implementation, so scheduling and documentation is not a priority.
- * The change authority may be separate from what is standard or normal practice, typically smaller in number but with greater capacity to expedite approval.
